In the Water Now Gang Rule or Court Rule? Omaha. Great City Hard Work Pays

—By Arthur Brisbane—

CHICAGO, May 4—Using the language of the old "Midway," Uncle Sam may say:

"I'm in the water now."

The House has passed the "inflation bill," so-called, and those that spend public money will be able to say, if they choose:

"What's a billion among friends—or ten billions?"

However, there are two kinds of inflation: common sense use of the nation's credit with the backing of its gigantic wealth and foolish inflation, based on reckless spending and money printing. To the question: "What do you think of inflation?" The answer is the same as you would give to the question: "What do you think about drinking?" It all depends on how much you drink.

One thing is certain. Millions will conclude that the best thing to do with a dollar is to spend it. That will help business and employment. And American common sense can be trusted to use American credit wisely.

Having rid its mind of all worry about the coming exposition, which will open on time and in full glory, Chicago turns its attention seriously to racketeers and racketeer rule. Bootleg beer profits, with inferior beer sold at $50 a barrel, constituted the backbone of Chicago's racketeer finance.

With beer of good quality sold legally at $15 a barrel, the mainstay of the racketeer disappears.

Their plan now, as proved by numerous bomb explosions, is to make "legitimate business" provide profits formerly derived from illegitimate beer.

The proposed racketeer invasion of business reaches from labor unions to milk dealers, ice and coal merchants, cleaners and dyers, and dozens of other lines.

The boldness of the gang rulers, plainly bent on public intimidation, is extraordinary. Five bombs were exploded, all within a few minutes of each other, beginning at half-past two, day before yesterday, in "The Loop," Chicago's business center.

Chicago proposes to show that it cannot be so easily frightened, and its citizens, distrusting public officials that have allowed crime to continue on a bribery basis for so long, will take into their own hands the job of wiping out gang terrorism.

They will get suggestions, rather violent, but effective, from the history of San Francisco and from London's line of action, when menaced by a gang of garroters.

London used the cat-o-nine tails, in every case, within 15 minutes of conviction, and garroting ceased suddenly.

San Francisco's vigilance committees used the rope, without bothering about court procedure, and criminals immediately decided that San Francisco was not a desirable residence.

Chicago must make its own choice between rule by gangs and rule by the citizens and their courts.

Cheerful news meets you at Omaha, on the way here, and signs of prosperity are all along the line through Nebraska.

L. B. Tobin, publisher of the Omaha Bee-News, proud of his city and State, tells you that Omaha, second largest live stock market in the world—Chicago first, of course—has annual receipts ranging as high as eight million seven hundred and fifty thousand head of cattle, sheep and hogs.

Over three-fifths of the stock is processed in Omaha packing houses, which means employment for Omaha.

In addition, Omaha is one of the country's principal grain centers, handling 26,000,000 bushels of wheat a year, and it is the largest butter manufacturing city in the world, and therefore the world's largest distributor of life-giving vitamins.

It is the fourth railroad center in the United States, with ten trunk lines, bringing traffic to Omaha over 73,250 miles of track.

And Omaha has money. Thirty-ninth in population among American cities, it stands nineteen in annual bank clearings.

Most important, prices and prosperity are rising. Prices of Nebraska farm products on the farm have increased from 28 to 212 per cent. Corn, from 3 cents, and less, to 28 cents; wheat, from 20 cents to 55 cents; eggs, from 7 to 11 cents a dozen; oats, from 5 to 15 cents a bushel; hogs, from $2.85 to $3.65 per hundred weight.

And the best of it is that farmers will get a large part of the increased values. They still hold on their farms, unsold and now in active demand, farm products that have increased in

HUNT LINDY GANG IN KIDNAPING

SECRET STORY OF M'KNIGHT FIGHT TOLD

Battled 3 State Bank Heads; Industrial Straw Plot Bared

Edwin T. McKnight's story of a struggle to keep two state bank commissioners from closing the Industrial Bank & Trust Co., before it was finally closed by a third, was read today in Suffolk Superior Court, where McKnight and 12 others are on trial on conspiracy charges.

McKnight, former president of the closed Medford Trust Co., and now serving a jail term for larceny and other offenses, originally told this story to the grand jury in the customary secret session.

Asst. Dist. Atty. John J. Murphy today read the questions fired at the banker in the grand jury room, while McKnight's attorney, Daniel J. Gallagher, read the answers.

HOVEY DEMANDED CLEANUP

The Government claims that the directors of the Industrial carried out a McKnight plan, thereby, with the use of "straw" men and illegal transfers, the bank's financial condition was made to appear stronger.

"Bank Commissioner Hovey was shouting and hollering that he wanted the savings department cleaned up," testified McKnight before the grand jury. "As long as the directors made some substantial headway, he would not close the bank."

Hovey is one of the defendants in the case, which is being heard by Judge John J. Burns, without a jury.

"There is a statement that I want to make," continued McKnight.

"Mr. Allen (who was bank com-

'Twas 48, But Real Storm Is Coming

"Forty-eight," said the weather prophet from his perch in the Federal Building today.

"Forty-eight what? States in the Union?" he was asked.

"No, 48 is the temperature at the present time. A bit cooler than yesterday. Also a bit drier. But . . ."

And here's the bad news. A storm in Texas is moving toward Boston for the week-end.

Lowell, May 4—A Lowell shoe worker was shot in the face by one of a group of 10 men who attacked the car in which he was driving to work today in the first case of violence in connection with the shoe strike, which has kept 3500 men idle for the past five weeks.

The wounded man is George Forrence, 22, of Hudson, N. H. He was being driven to Lowell by his brother-in-law, Leo Gagnon.

In Tyngsboro a gang of 10 men believed to be striking workers, stormed the car with stones. Suddenly the blast of a shotgun was heard and Forrence fell, crying in pain.

'Be Good to Her,' Mother's Prayer

To the kidnapers of her daughter "Peggy," wherever they may be, Mrs. Margaret Kales McMath broadcast a message today, giving instructions for care of 10-year-old "Peggy," and in the same message she included words of advice to the little girl to "be a good little girl."

The gentle-faced mother, breaking her silence when 48 hours had passed with no word from her first born, followed the example of Anne Morrow Lindbergh in issuing through the newspapers advice as to the care of the child.

The message says:

"If it is necessary to take Peggy around in an automobile, please be sure and give her some gum, because she is subject to car sickness and that prevents it.

"My girl likes all kinds of meat and she is very fond of milk. She eats all vegetables, excepting turnip and spinach. If you offer her either turnip or spinach, please don't attempt to force her to eat it.

"Peggy likes nothing more than a puppy or a kitten to play with. She had a setter dog until a few months ago, when it died.

"Please try to put her to bed at 8 o'clock. That is her usual bedtime. Please be sure to keep her warmly clothed.

"In the message Mrs. McMath included the following advice to the kidnaped girl:

"I wish you to be a good little girl and do exactly what you are told to do."

Here is a recent photograph of 10-year-old Margaret McMath, kidnaped on Cape Cod Tuesday afternoon. Have you seen her? If not, study her pretty features so that you may recognize her. And if you see the girl, act quickly. Call the Evening American City Editor, Liberty 4000. (International News Photos.)

Ann Harding Shaken as Shark Eats Sailor

Havana, Cuba, May 4—Ann Harding, blonde film star, was shaken and broken-hearted today after a scene of horror enacted before her eyes.

Clinging to a capsized sailboat with two companions yesterday, Miss Harding saw sharks kill an aged Cuban sailor who was swimming to shore for aid.

"The sharks ate him!"

That was the cry with which Marie Lombard, the actress' secretary greeted rescuers who finally saved her, the actress and Alexander Kirkland, another Hollywood luminary.

All three, who clung to the 20-foot craft for three hours, three miles off the Jaimanitas Yacht Club, are suffering from shock and exposure.

"We decided to go sailing yesterday afternoon," said Miss Lombard.

"We got a small boat from the Jaimanitas Club, manned by a lovely old Cuban, Majin Alvares Tuero. Three miles off Jaimanitas a sudden, strong wind capsized the boat. Miss Harding fell into the water.

"The sailor cried, 'don't be afraid; stay on the boat. We're coming on.' He pulled Miss Harding up. After five or ten minutes the Cuban said he would try to make land and bring help.

"He struck out but swam only a short distance when a fin cut through the water. The fin was going at the swimming man—and there was a scream and he was dragged down, under the surface.

"After three or four hours we sighted a motor launch in which Capt. Leslie Waggett and George Andrews, third secretary of the American embassy, were going fishing.

"Kirland, who had been waving his shirt, said it was not big enough and asked for Miss Harding's skirt. He placed it on an oar and succeeded in attracting attention.

"They brought us to Jaimanitas and thence to the hotel, where doctors attended us. The shock and exposure were terrible."

She added that they were almost completely submerged, clinging the while to the boat "for dear life."

Miss Harding, former wife of Harry Bannister, has denied reports she and Kirkland will marry.

Giant Bandit Attacks Troy in Prison Fight

Armed with a hammer and a knife, Joseph E. Keyes, the "giant bandit," now serving 12 to 20 years in State Prison, beat John Troy, former leader of the Troy Gang in Worcester, almost unconscious today in the State Prison.

Troy was saved from further punishment under the blows of the hammer by "Sad Willie" Gray Brighton bandit who shot a special police officer. Gray rushed out of a room near the prison hospital when he heard the sound of battle.

As a result of teh attack, Keyes and two fellow-convicts who accompanied him to the prison arch under the hospital, where they ambushed Troy, were locked up in solitary confinement.

According to Deputy Warden Herman Godendorf, the other two convicts, William D. Lawler, a burgler, and Jerry Collins, an armed robber, carried sharp knives, fashione dout of files when they accompanied Keyes, but they did not take part in the attack.

The attack came a week after a quarrel in the prison yard between Keyes and Troy, the former becoming angered when Troy advised his brother Mike to keep away from the "giant bandit," during recreation periods, as Keyes was "bad medicine."

Troy, suffering from contusions about the head, face and shoulders, was removed to the prison hospital.

N. Y. MAN DESIGNATED TO NEGOTIATE FOR THE RETURN OF GIRL

BULLETIN

Brig.-Gen. Needham, head of the Massachusetts State Police today declared that he believed the same gang of kidnapers who murdered the Lindbergh baby were responsible for the kidnaping of Margaret McMath. He declared that the solution of the McMath case may be the answer to the Lndbergh mystery.

DEVELOPMENTS IN KIDNAP MYSTERY

1—First contact between kidnapers and family of stolen Peggy McMath indicated. Official spokesman, William Lee, awaits important long-distance call after mystery mission, predicts important news in short time. Names his uncle, New York resident, as intermediary, "if kidnapers are in New York."

2—Radio-directed Cape Cod search points to Indian settlements at Mashpee and Brava Voodoo colony. Fifty picked troopers scour woods and dunes.

3—Indefinite extension of the 48-hour "open door" policy giving kidnapers access to the McMath home at Harwichport. All night fruitless vigil kept by family. Mrs. McMath pleads for daughter's safety.

4—Detectives reach conclusion actual abduction was one man job and that the kidnaper was known to Peggy. Still undecided whether he was Negro or blacked-up white man.

5—Secret Service agents familiar with Lindbergh case seek "Black Leo" Cellura, fugitive Detroit gangster. State police seek Harry Roth, of Revere, Cape rum runner, and Negro chauffeur on two clues.

6—Mayor Curley, in Washington, visits Department of Justice headquarters personally to request every government agency and the best secret service men to work on the case.

Contact between the kidnapers of Margaret "Peggy" McMath, 10, stolen Tuesday from the Harwich village school, and some member or representative of her family has either been established or is momentarily anticipated, it was indicated today.

William Lee, of Harwichport, spokesman for the child's socially prominent parents, Mr. and Mrs. Neil C. McMath, was absent this morning for two hours on a mysterious mission. Upon his return he told newspapermen:

"I expect that I will have very important news for you in a very short time. I am now waiting for a very important telephone call, by long distance."

Lee Names N. Y. Uncle as Intermediary

He then announced appointment of his uncle, Aaron Davis of 245 E. 42nd st., New York, as an intermediary through whom the kidnapers may make known their demands without fear of exposure.

"If the kidnapers are in New York then can feel free to call him or get in touch with him in any other way at any time with the same assurance of protection from arrest and prosecution that they have here," Lee said.

Whether this appointment was connected with the call and news he expected he did not say.

"Has contact already been once made and did it fail?" he was asked.

Lee, who is red-headed and bears a resemblance to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, hesitated, then answered, "No."

"Do you expect an arrest?"

He would make no reply.

During his absence from home a scheduled conference with the press was twice postponed by Lee's wife, who said she did not know where he was but that he was not at the McMath home, an eighth of a mile away. Yet he had been at the McMath home when he finally returned to his own house, having stopped there en route from wherever he had been.

Missing Girl's Mother Bearing Up Bravely

"Mrs. McMath is standing up very bravely," Lee said. "She and Mr. McMath obtained five or six hours' sleep last night. Mrs. McMath is living in hope that her child is still unharmed. She has not wept or broken down as yet.

"She is trying to assist us in every way. We have been living over all possible angles thinking of people and connections. Both Mr. and Mrs. McMath have sat in with me frequently discussing

PLANS TO HOLD WHOLE SUPPLY AS BASE FOR EXPANSION

Washington, May 4 (INS). The calling of gold to the Treasury and Federal Reserve Banks was viewed in some quarters today as preparatory to a new government fiscal policy under which all monetary gold would be impounded permanently by the government.

Under the emergency program the government is attempting to get all gold out of circulation so the base for currency may be expanded. Under a permanent setup, control of gold withdrawals might b practiced, although on a more liberal basis than at present.

A gradual reduction of gold and gold certificates in circulation with the eventual development of a currency situation like that in England and France, where virtually no gold circulates, would be the result of such a program.

Out of $4,310,000,000 monetary gold stocks in the United States about $700,000,000 is in circulation, although a strong effort is being made to get it back in the Federal Reserve Banks and the Treasury. The return of these gold certificates and gold would form the base for the issuance of about $1,750,000,000 in additional paper money.

America's checkered currency experiences, notably with greenbacks after the Civil War and the silver agitations of the 90's, led to legislation requiring the payment of government obligations in gold and the wide practice of placement of the gold clause in private securities.

The country has been on the gold standard continuously from 1879 until recently, although it was nearly forced off in 1893.

80 Amendments Slow Up Farm Bill Passage

BULLETIN

Washington, May 4 (AP)—George Peek of Moline, Ill., has virtually been decided upon as chief administrator of the farm measure.

Washington, May 4 (AP)—Doubt whether the huge farm relief-inflation bill can become law before next week was expressed today by Chairman Jones of the House agriculture committee as Senate House conferees met for the first time to reconcile differences between the measures by the two houses.

The Senate inflation amendment, accepted by the House by more than a 3 to 1 majority, was not in dispute but over 80 amendments relating to the relief and farm mortgage sections of the measure remained to be settled.

Jones said a majority of the Senate amendments were not of a major character, but that several were important. Secretary Wallace is opposed strongly to the Norris-Simpson amendment, designed to assure the farmer the cost of production plus a reasonable profit.

Another amendment expected to cause difficulty was that which added sugar to the commodities covered in the bill. Also, cattle were stricken out by the Senate.

What Are You Going to Do About It?

The Boston Evening American offers a reward of $5,000 for the return of Margaret Peggy McMath and for exclusive information that will result in the apprehension and conviction of the kidnapers, under conditions given in detail elsewhere in this edition.

This innocent schoolgirl, only ten years old, has been made the victim of a foul and brutal crime.

Her parents are torn by the despair and agony which were suffered by Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh over their own dear baby.

Kidnaping is the foulest and the lowest of crimes.

The modern system of racketeering is as low and bestial as it is cowardly.

It robs the businessman of the little property he has built by a lifetime of toil; it robs the poor workman on his way home with his weekly pay envelope; it peddles dope and vile liquors that blind and kill and it entices harmless children, to be held in dangerous captivity for torture money.

American racketeering has built up an underworld of vice and crime which imperils the security of this country.

You must have government of law and order or you will have government by gangdom.

The kidnaping of Margaret Peggy McMath calls to the decent people of America for vengeance. This Commonwealth certainly must not countenance this invasion by mid-Western hoodlums and terrorists.

Either we must drive out the gangsters or the gangsters will drive us into a condition of economic slavery, paying tribute to the slave master at the end of a bullwhip; as they already have done in many cities.

It is to stimulate the war in the name of decency upon the underworld of crime, it is to aid in restoring this innocent child to her agonized parents and it is to punish these vandals guilty of the atrocious crime that the Boston Evening American offers the reward in the case of Margaret Peggy McMath.

MacDonald Also Says He Has Reservation for Tariff Truce

London, May 4 (INS) — The problem of foreign debt payments will not come before the world economic conference, Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald told Commons today.

The premier made his unexpected announcement in reply to a question by George Lansbury, Laborite opposition leader, after he had given the House a formal statement setting forth the progress of his decent discussions with President Roosevelt in Washington.

In his statement, the Premier announced he would make reservations to the tariff truce proposed by the United States, when the project is officially brought before the conference here on June 12.

"While I welcomed the idea of a tariff truce," he said, "I made it plain that its application would have to be subject to safeguards which the differences in our positions require. This was considered reasonable."

Greeted by cheers from the government benches when he entered the House at 4 p. m. to report in detail on his trip to Washington, MacDonald said his conversations with President Roosevelt followed the lines indicated in his speech in Commons on April 13.

"Tariffs, quotas, exchange control and stability of currency were discussed, as well as debts in all their aspects," he said.

FIRE ENGINE, LADDER CRASH

Ladder 19 and engine 2, both of which occupy the same station at K and Fourth sts., South Boston, collided today at Broadway and O sts., while en route to a fire. Both were damaged.

The crash was due to the fact that the ladder truck, driven by Theodore Creesey, took a route through Broadway instead of the prescribed route via Fourth st. Creesey did this because both trucks had just returned from an alarm, and were still outside the station when the new alarm sounded. It would have taken too long to turn completely around. Both fires were insignificant.

She was taken to the Weymouth Hospital, where her condition is critical. White was arrested on charges of drunkenness and assault with a dangerous weapon.

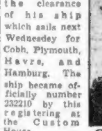
30-Hour Week a Myth to Secretary's Chauffeur

Washington, May 4—The 30-hour week, sponsored by Secretary of Labor Perkins, has the hearty approval of Louis St. George, her chauffeur, who resigned his position because, he says, he had to work 12 to 17 hours a day.



According to the chauffeur, when he informed Miss Perkins he was resigning, she asked:

"What's the matter, are you in poor health?" "No, indeed," replied Mr. St. George, "but I soon will be if I keep up working 17 hours a day."

The Polish Aero Club protested to the R. A. C. against an article describing the airwoman's flight to Tokio in 1931. In it she told of a forced landing in Poland, and was quoted as describing "dirty, bearded, evil looking men," who tried to drag her into a hut.

value by more than fifty-one million dollars.

There is money in circulation, and George Brandeis, able merchant of Omaha, knows it. With his young associate, Karl Louis, he presents interesting facts and figures, including the fact that he realizes the importance of first getting what the people want, then letting them know about it, in advertising. Says he:

"I have just ordered a solid eight-page advertisement for next Sunday, in the Omaha Bee-News, which prints your articles. Mr. Louis and I read them every day. That eight-page advertisement we shall follow up with full-page advertisements. When you are in business, do not leave too much to the public imagination. Tell them about it."

That plan is recommended to other merchants, who wonder what is wrong with business.

In connection with the proposed 30-hour week, 6-hour day, five days "work," Mr. Brandeis presents a theory which many young gentlemen will abhor. He says hard work does not hurt anybody.

He used to work in the Chicago-Boston store for Charles Netcher, the owner, when Mr. Netcher slept every night on the hard counter, and sent out for his meals. Brandeis and Netcher used to arrange furniture, rugs, etc., on the sidewalk, in front of the store, before sunrise, to attract business.

Later, when Mr. Netcher married (his widow runs the store now), Brandeis took the job of sleeping in the store. Says Brandeis:

"But I was a sybarite, compared with Netcher, and I used to get blankets from the bedding department, sleep with them on the counter, and put them back in the morning."

The late Benjamin Altman, one of the greatest American merchants, used to buy goods for his tiny "first store" on Sixth ave., pay cash, and carry the merchandise home on his back.

All that will seem dull to many young Americans, whose motto is: "Why should I kill myself?" But George Brandeis has not killed himself. At 55, he drives his auto to his cattle ranch, 350 miles from Omaha, leaving home before daybreak, gets there in time for lunch, rides his horses all afternoon, and drives back at night.

And, like Netcher, Altman, Marshall Field, Gimbel, Wanamaker and thousands of other hard workers, he has made a big fortune and is HIS OWN BOSS. That is better than being bossed by someone else all your life, if only for six hours a day.

Harwich School chums of "Peggy" McMath discuss kidnaping

The saddened Harwichport home of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Cook McMath

Children who knew Margaret "Peggy" McMath—boys and girls who were in her class at the Harwich Grammar School—could not help authorities in their investigation of the kidnaping of the 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Cook McMath. You see the children grouped about a school boy reading the Boston American as they discuss the kidnaping story. There is an outstanding determination on the part of the Massachusetts officials to leave nothing undone that would lead to the safe return of Margaret Gray McMath and the prosecution of her kidnapers. At the Harwichport home of the McMath family, from where their daughter and son Francis went to the Harwich school in a bus each school day, there was sadness, but a determination to find their daughter. McMath called in the press representatives yesterday, entreating their every help in finding the kidnaped child. McMath insisted his family was not rich—but that he would pay the kidnapers everything

MRS. EASTMAN SUED FOR LOVE BY GIRL

Philadelphia, May 4 (AP)—The Evening Public Ledger in a copyrighted article today says that Mrs. Bessie Dobson Altemus Eastman has been sued for alienation of the affections of a husband from whom she was divorced 22 years ago.

Mrs. Eastman is the mother of Mrs. John Hay Whitney, of New York.

The article says the suit was brought by Miss Estelle F. Maxwell, who alleges that she has been engaged for years to Lemuel C. Altemus, but that their marriage was prevented by Mrs. Eastman and her son, James Dobson Altemus. The latter is also a defendant in the action.

Both Mrs. Eastman and her son denied emphatically that they knew of the engagement. Mrs. Eastman and Altemus were divorced in 1911, and in 1924 she was married to Major Nedom A. Eastman.

Grandparents Plead for Girl

Detroit, May 4 (INS)—Grieving Detroit relatives of kidnaped Peggy McMath, 10-year-old heiress to two Detroit industrial fortunes, today invited the girl's abductors to "communicate with us—we will be only too ready to cor-operate."

"If the kidnapers are afraid to go to Neil (Peggy's father, Neil Cook McMath) let them come to us, without fear; we only want Peggy back," Mrs. Francis C. McMath, her paternal grandmother said.

William R. Hales, maternal grandfather of the little girl, reiterated that the family could not raise a large ransom in cash. Mrs. Kolee is the daughter of John S. Gray, one of the original stockholders of the Ford Motor Co. Her inheritance in Ford stock from her father was about $7,000,000. Little of this now available.

BUCKLEY URGES MORE BOSTON LICENSES

BULLETIN

The joint committee on legal affairs today reported Rep. Lewis R. Sullivan's bill to increase the number of retail licenses for Boston from 176 to 501 favorably by unanimous vote.

Alleged inequality in the beer license law as applied to Boston was forcibly demonstrated by John F. Buckley, member of the state alcoholic beverage control commission, today.

Speaking in favor of a bill introduced by Rep. Lewis R. Sullivan, Jr., of Dorchester, before the joint committee on legal affairs today, Buckley said:

"Charlestown's Ward 2 has a population of 37,800. Under the present law, Ward 2 is entitled to only eight beer licenses.

"A city or town of this same number of residents would be entitled to 24 licenses. Rep. Sullivan's bill would enable Ward 2 to get 21 licenses. I am strongly in favor of the bill. More licenses would mean a reduction in license fees from $300 to perhaps $200."

At present, Boston is entitled to only 176 licenses, or one to every 4300 residents. Under Sullivan's proposed bill, it would be entitled to 501.

Here's how the various wards would fare under Sullivan's bill. Ward 1 would have 33 licenses; ward 2, 21; ward 3, 34; ward 4, 21; ward 5, 21; ward 6, 23; ward 7, 22; ward 8, 21; ward 9, 21; ward 10, 20; ward 11, 20; ward 12, 24; ward 13, 20.

Ward 14, 32; ward 15, 19; ward 16, 21; ward 17, 21; ward 18, 26; ward 19, 19; ward 20, 21; ward 21, 20; ward 22, 21.

HUNT DETROIT FOR GIRL CLUES

Detroit, May 4 (AP)—Police today scanned the haunts of known racketeers in the hope of finding a clue to the abductors of 10-year-old Margaret McMath in Harwichport, Mass., whose parents lived here until two years ago.

The underworld characters were understood to be among the specific objects of the search being carried on by a squad of six detectives.

One is "Black Leo" Celiura, once a power in Detroit's underworld and already sought as a suspect in two slaying cases.

The other is John "Red" Reorden, held by police to be the only member of the Joseph "Legs" Lehman kidnaping gang still at large. He has been sought since the David Cass abduction of five years ago, the most notorious exploit attributed to the Lehman gang.

Intimates of Celiura scoffed at the report that he was seen in a bootleggers' colony near the scene of the McMath kidnaping.

They declare he has been within 20 minutes' ride of Detroit for the last five months.

Federal agents say he was traced last month to Sagamore, about 28 miles from Harwich, and was identified with a group of Detroit gangsters running liquor from Cape Cod to Buffalo.

Insurance Company Asks Tax Bill Cost

Washington, May 4 (AP)—The National Fire Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn., has asked the board of tax appeals to review a ruling by the internal revenue collector that it owes an additional $46,502 on its 1920 income tax.

The principal item in controversy is the deduction from gross income of $145,676 for additional unearned premium reserves required by the Massachusetts law.

Today, in the real estate columns of the Classified Ads, you will find scores of opportunities for profitable investment.

He Will Pay!

JUDGE CALLED TO TELL ABOUT FLAG KISSING

Le Mars, Iowa, May 4 (AP)—Judge C. C. Bradley, victim of an attack by farmers who dragged him from the bench and threatened to hang him, appeared today before the military court to give testimony regarding the outbreak.

Judge Bradley had appeared at the hearings yesterday, but did not testify.

Today the military court of four members met to hear his testimony. The session was secret.

W. Scott Reiniger, Bradley's court reporter, also was called.

Judge Bradley was taken from his court room a week ago to a lonely cross roads, where a rope was placed about his neck. He was choked unconscious because he refused to swear that he would uphold the constitutionality of Iowa's new mortgage moratorium laws in test cases pending before him.

He complied with a request to pray and was released after he had been crowned with a greasy hub cap from a truck and his trousers taken off and filled with grease and mud.

SCOUTS SEARCH MURDER CLUES IN BERKSHIRE

North Adams, May 4—Fifty police and Boy Scouts, led by Chief Conlon, began search today in the vicinity of the hillside where the body of Leah Lloyd Johnson was found for her overnight case and the knife with which she was slain.

Norman Granger, 25, the self-styled amateur detective, who found the girl's handbag, compact, rouge stick and other articles two days after her body was discovered, went to the police station announcing he had "some more hot stuff." Chief Conlon was out and the youth left, refusing to tell anybody else what his "hot tip" was.

Police will also submit Leo Tatro, 33, a laborer, of Pownal, Vt., who until a short time ago lived in Lincoln st., here, to further questioning. He was arrested in Vermont yesterday and brought here on a charge of neglect to provide for his wife.

...PE FOR LOST BABY WANES

Ossipee, N. H., May 4—Weary searchers continued their hunt in the woods and swamps around the Pine River today for little Sarah Walker, 2, missing since Monday morning.

Meanwhile County Solicitor Preston Smart and Sheriff James Welch announced they were following several clues, which they hoped would lead to the missing baby.

Opinion still held to the theory that the child was the victim of a hit-and-run driver who fled after disposing of the body. Residents pointed out that the most intensive search in the county history, in which bloodhounds and 150 convicts in the Carroll County jail were employed, had failed to reveal any clue.

SOCIETY GIRL AIDS FIRST DENTAL CLINIC

MISS SAKLAD DR. MALLET SARO SANO MISS ILSLEY

Two new anesthetics, avertin and nembutal, were demonstrated today in dental work in City Hospital in the first public clinic in oral surgery ever held in a Massachusetts hospital, and a Milton society girl took part. Dr. Stephen P. Mallet, oral surgeon-in-chief is shown working on the patient, Saro Sano of East Boston while Miss Elizabeth Saklad, dental hygienist, and Miss Mary D. Ilsley, Junior League member, an assistant to Dr. Mallet, aided in the treatment.

Medical history was made today in the City Hospital, when the first clinic in oral surgery to be held in a Massachusetts hospital took place under the auspices of the Massachusetts Dental Society, which is having its annual convention in the Hotel Statler.

Twenty-four visiting doctors from all parts of the state attended the clinic, given as part of the regular work of the hospital dental service, of which Dr. Stephen P. Mallet is oral surgeon in chief.

Of particular interest was the use of avertin and nembutal, two new anesthetics supplementing the use of gas and ether. They may be taken in capsule form and are particularly valuable in dealing with nervous or high strung patients, Dr. Mallet said.

While they have been used for some time in other branches of medicine, particularly obstetrics, this is the first time that a Massachusetts hospital has ever demonstrated their use in oral surgery.

Miss Mary D. Ilsley of Milton, Junior League member, an assistant to Dr. Mallet, helped in the demonstration. Drs. W. Harry Gulliver, and Thomas Hennessey, and Miss Mary Sakland, dental hygienist, also assisted.

McKNIGHT FIGHT IS TOLD

missioner before Roy A. Hovey) made an assessment of $70 a share, amounting to $140,000 and demanded that it be paid by the stockholders of the Industrial. But they refused.

'WE PAID $101,000'

"We only owned a comparatively small amount, about 400 shares, but we paid in 104.00."

"Who do you mean by 'we'?" he was asked.

"Eaton & McKnight (the former law firm)."

"Did Eaton & McKnight pay the money in order to be a controlling factor in the bank?"

"No, we thought we were buying something of value. After we paid it, we got inside the bank and things that we thought were good turned out to be bad. The $104,000 didn't look like as much money to me then as it does now."

McKnight said that a great many conferences were held with Hovey, who had followed Allen as bank commissioner and demanded the assessment be met. The conferences were to prevent a closing. Hovey said, according to McKnight, that he did not want to close the institution, but would unless the entire $140,000 were paid.

SAYS HOVEY CUT PRICES

McKnight added that the directors objected to any further assessment because if one were made, it would become known to the public an dwould ruin the bank. Hovey, he said, suggested a voluntary assessment of $75,000 by the directors, but came down to $50,000, which was paid in.

Judge Burns here made his second effort to get the government and defense to agree as to the facts, leaving the question of law to him, on the real estate transfers that were subsequently made at the bank.

McKnight's attorney was willing to agree to everything except on the alleged transfer of funds out of the savings department into the commercial department. Asst. Dist.-Atty. Murphy, who admits there was no pecuniary gain by anybody in these transactions, claims funds were transferred in both directions between the departments.

As there was no complete agreement, the reading of McKnight's testimony continued, wherein the bank explained the transfers.

HOW "STRAWS" WORKED

As an example he took a parcel of real estate valued at $15,000. The bank had too much of this foreclosed property on its books. Title was given to a "straw man." The "straw man" gave the savings department a $6000 first mortgage. Then he have the commercial department a $4000 second mortgage. The commercial department handed $4000 over to the savings department.

The result was that the $15,000 piece of real estate was removed from the books of the savings department. In its place was a $6000 first mortgage and $4000 cash.

Testimony given before the grand jury by former Bank Commissioner Hovey was next read. Hovey recalled talks at his office with various directors but did not recall that McKnight was present.

Hovey recalled that some directors suggested to him that they should take over parcels of real estate to improve the situation in the savings department but he did not recall that the use of "straws" was suggested. He denied suggesting it.

"Then your natural reaction is against the use of straws?" he was asked.

"Yes. I told them not to cover up any transaction at all," he replied.

Hovey asserted that he never advised McKnight or any directors to get property out of the foreclosure account in any way except by legal sale.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Broadway Merry-Go-Round!

You might hop off this carousal to visit the N. V. A. ward of the French Hospital. I'd like to call your attention particularly to four girls bedded there—Mauda Ryan, one-time vaudeville star; dainty Ann Howe, a trapeze artist who dropped from a swinging height on a local stage and broke both her legs five months ago—just learning to walk again, the girl is Grace Gale, a slightly thinner edition of Jemima, and May Connette, a dancing lass. Sick gals, all of them—but it cheers you up to notice that their rooms are banked heavily with flowers—from wild spring blossoms to American beauties. Plants of every description on the floor and tables. Dolls scattered around and other trinkets. And each of the girls wears the finest of silk nightgowns. But here's the irony of the thing: Not one of them has a tube of toothpaste—not one of them has three cents for a stamp or a quarter for a jar of cold cream—or a bit of pocket change to buy little necessities not furnished by the hospital. In other words, friends send flowers and dolls and nightgowns—but no one thinks of handing the girls a few dollars for toothpaste, cosmetics, magazines, etc. I've mentioned only four cases—there must be half a hundred more scattered around in the local hospitals. Just a tip to some of you.

One day last week I advised you that on Sunday night under the auspices of the Pegasus Club a debate on Herr Hitler was to be conducted at which the deposed Consul Paul Schwartz was to preside and Dr. Otto Reischwitz, professor at Hunter College, was to present the Nazi side of the question—in other words, to defend the Hitler policies. Deposed Consul Schwartz changed his mind about presiding at the meeting. At the last moment this Hunter professor, pro-Hitlerite, sent this telegram: "Telephone agreement to exclusion of press not being kept I regret not being able to speak tonight. Reischwitz." In other words, the gentleman, so ardently in favor of cold-pogroming and Hitler's economic iron cuaiden didn't have the courage to speak out when he learned newspapermen might be present. Excuse my laff.

'Services Rendered'

A play about the effects of war has just closed in New York—to the disgrace of critics and public alike. The critics, seeing the merits of "For Services Rendered," praised it in just such terms as keep people away; and the public which went in spits of the critics, and was deeply moved, failed to spread the news effectively. Disaster piled on disaster in the play and none of it could not be directly traced to the war, so that the argument seemed forced. Yet Somerset Maugham, the author, precisely proved his point by making the woman who is to die of cancer (a "natural" death, not a war casualty) face her death with heroism and decency, while the others, the suicide, the faithless husbands, the girl driven mad are all horrible.

I sat listening to this play, deeply concerned with its characters (and profoundly admiring the work of Miss Fay Bainter as the girl whose lover was killed in the war), and thought, every once in a while, that the same thing might have happened to a family never touched by war at all. And skilfully the author brought the lesson home, living up business failure and loose morals and calamity to the way men and women had lived between 1914 and 1918. Still resisting a little, I thought that this family must be the exception; but when one out of every ten families suffered a death and four out of ten received back a wounded man, you cannot talk lightly of exceptions. I recognized the simple fact that I did not want to face the actualities of the war, and the moment I knew that it was a definite pleasure to face them.

Up in Harlem there's a new spot with an old-time favorite, Gladys Bentley. The Aasonia Club, they call it, although if you're observant you'll notice that it's spelled "Aasonia" on the canopy. One of those atmospheric little places, and the giggle is that there's a green light outside, almost as if to tempt the policemen to come in and make it their home. Gladys, fat and joyous, in her ample tuxedo, with the perspiration beading down her face and neck, chants those highly spiced ditties while ladies and gents of refinement and otherwise giggle hysterically. A sepian lad of lithping tendencies sings torch ballads tenderly, breaking off into a soprano, that unlike most male sopranos, doesn't annoy. Jaharal, he calls himself, and I haven't seen him for almost three years. The last time was when a party of us, including Helen Morgan, decided to make the Harlem rounds and met for the first one of Harlem's suave lads named Clinton Moore, who took us up to his apartment where assembled were some of the queerest lads and gals you can imagine. Highly talented and what an entertainment they put on for us, with Helen hopping onto the piano and doing her share, too. Jaharal was among them, and for an hour he told me in Oxfordian accents of his experiences in London and Paris—sighing as he explained, that in Paris, particularly, they knew how to treat a colored gentleman of talent. It moved all of us considerably—Helen, particularly for coming down stairs in the broad daylight, she noticed two stoutish Negro women, waiting for the employment office to open and she leaned over and whispered, "Louie, how much money have you got?" I reached into my pocket and took out $60. (This was in the pre-Starrtman era.) She grabbed it from me, separated the bills, and thrust them into the hands of the gaping women and ran out singing, "That's my Bill."

HARBOR POLICE MERGED WITH NORTH END

Abolition of the harbor police, three promotions to lieutenant, six new sergeants, and several transfers were announced in general orders at police headquarters today.

A precedent which had the old salts of the police department aghast was established with the definite announcement that Station 8, the old harbor police, was to be merged with the North End station.

It was previously reported that this merger would be made, but until today a change in plans was thought possible.

With the change, Capt. John J. Mullen of Hanover st. station, takes on the additional title of harbor master. Three lieutenants and six sergeants now on harbor duty become assistant harbor masters. The former tradition of the department was that a harbor master had to hold a pilot's license. Capt. Mullen holds no such license.

The commissioner plans to use the old harbor station house as a base for the signal service and as a garage, it was learned.

Promotions of three sergeants to the grade of lieutenant and their new stations were announced as follows: Carleton E. Perry, Station 8, goes to the Hanover st. station; Thomas G. Duggan goes from the Charlestown station to the West Roxbury station, and Francis M. Tiernan is transferred from the Bureau of Records to Station 12, South Boston.

New sergeants and their transfers were also announced. Frank P. Luzinski goes from East Boston to the Bureau of Criminal Investigation, as do John J. Ward, Milk st. station and Frank Bohmbach, Jr., now attached to the Joy st. station.

Charles Bailey is promoted to sergeant and remains in the office of Supt. Crowley. Patrolmen Edward J. Boyle and Arthur M. Tiernan are promoted to sergeants and remain in the B. C. I.

The commissioner also announced the consolidation of the City Point and Athens st. stations in the near future.

250,000 JOIN IN PROTEST MARCH

New York, May 4 (INS)—The greatest parade in the history of New York city, in which 250,000 persons will participate, was promised today for May 10 by Dr. Samuel Margoshes, chairman of the American Jewish Congress.

It will be a demonstration of protest against the action of the German Nazi government, which will that day make bonfires in public squares throughout Germany of books and manuscripts written by Jewish authors.

Dr. Margoshes asserted there will be 50 floats in the parade, depicting Jewish grievances against the German dictatorship of Adolf Hitler, a whole division of rabbis, in their clerical robes, and numerous bands.

The Boston College Club will have an auxiliary committee taking an active part in the affairs for the first time in its history.

Among the invited guests are Governor Ely, John E. Swift, Sen. Crowley, Mayor Quigley, Ex-Mayor Whalen, Reps. McDonald and Melley and several prominent B. C. athletes.

Colorado Mountain on the Move Again

Durango, Col., May 4 (INS)—Carbon Mountain, Colorado's moving peak, was within 400 feet of the Animas River today after a tremendous upheaval covering an area approximating that of 25 city blocks.

The side of the peak facing the river took the form of a sheer cliff, where formerly it was easy to ascend. On the side away from the river a huge mass of rock poised ready to crash into a canyon below.

JUDGE'S LETTER SAVES SPEEDER FROM NEW CHARGE

If James B. House of Sea st., Quincy, would turn in his car and get a horse and buggy he'd be saved a lot of trouble, but everything was finally ironed out nicely today, when one judge came to his assistance against another prosecution.

House, a traveling salesman, was summoned into Woburn court for speeding in Wilmington. He made Bellows Falls, Vt., yesterday and had to race back to Woburn for court today.

Judge Jesse W. Morton filed the case and then in some embarrassment, House told the court that while hurrying down from Bellows Falls he had been tabbed for speeding in Gardner. The officer there wouldn't believe House was going to court, but said he would tear up the complaint if House, on his way back to Vermont, would bring a note from the judge in Woburn court as proof that his story was correct.

When the laughter in court had subsided, Judge Morton wrote a note to start House out again with a clean slate.

STATE TROOPERS HUNT KIDNAPERS AND GIRL NEAR HARWICH

U. S. SECRET SERVICE AGENTS SEEK DETROIT GANGSTER

sing possible steps that should be taken."

He quoted Mrs. McMath as saying:

"I do hope that they will be good to little Peggy until she is returned to me. I do hope that they will not harm her."

McMath, who yesterday pledged every cent he could raise as ransom, at the same time denying he had access to huge wealth, talked by the phone at his home all the morning. Lee said. The spokesman, who is a boatbuilding associate of McMath, said he would not admit it, if ransom were asked.

Indian Camps Are Visited by Troopers

On orders flashed by radio, 20 of 50 State troopers scouring the Cape for traces of the little girl and her abductors visited two Indian settlements in Mashpee and made inquiries. Some remained there and others moved on in the direction of Falmouth.

A settlement of Bravas midway between Brewster and Harwich, where it is reported ancient "voodoo rites" or something akin to them are practised, was also visited by the police.

The Mashpee search was ordered by radio-telephoned to the cruising cars by Brig. Gen. Daniel Needham, new commissioner of public safety who is directing the search from his office in Boston. Cape is being scoured from the canal to Provincetown.

Mashpee is about 15 miles from the kidnaping scene. The far-flung township is sparsely settled and heavily wooded. There are two Indian camps, vague reminders of the days when the Mashpee Indians ruled the Cape. Most of the remaining "Indians" are half-breeds or quarter-breeds, interbred with whites and Bravas.

Within the area there are also many Brava settlements.

Needham Hopeful of Success in Search

Gen. Needham said he did not care to tell the source or nature of a telephone call he received a quarter hour after the troopers started, but he appeared hopeful that the Mashpee search might have a happy result.

A lecture on "the lesson of the Lindbergh case" was given the troopers before the general search began.

"You men keep in mind that the Lindbergh baby was found murdered within a mile of its home," was the advice of Lieut. James Hughes, as they lined up for instructions in front of the Harwichport police station.

Two-way radio communication between the searchers and the state police broadcasting truck, which remained in Harwichport, was in effect.

The Cape area had been blocked out for the search. Troopers were instructed to inspect all camps, empty or occupied, make inquiries at all gasoline stations, grocery stores where strangers might buy food, clothing stores where clothing for children might be purchased.

"Because the victim is a little girl it is no reason she will be dressed as a little girl when found," Lieut. Hughes warned. "Ask about all purchases of boys' clothing as well."

Search Extended at Sea for Abductors

All open camps were to be searched. All occupied camps were to have their occupants subjected to questioning.

Remaining at the base, receiving reports and transmitting orders, were Capt. James O. Mahoney and Sergt. Dempsey, Ryan and White with Gen. Needham.

As the search by land widened, so did the search by sea as no word came regarding the fate of the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nevil Cecil McMath, both members of wealthy and socially prominent Detroit families.

Coast Guard boats, fog-bound with few exceptions yesterday, moved out to inspect all suspicious looking craft and to board all such craft within three miles of shore.

If the kidnaping was an organized gang job, the child may have left the Cape by boat or plane, and might even have been taken to Rum Row. There are few smugglers on the Row now, since the bottom of the liquor market fell out with the return of beer. This very condition, it is felt, may have led rum gangsters to turn their hand to kidnaping.

Close Watch Kept on Shipping at Sea

Since the afternoon of the kidnaping, a coastguard vessel has been stationed off Nobska light, at what is known as "The Neck," stopping, boarding and searching all vessels.

Late last night the 60 foot Boston fishing vessel Charley M. Ford was stopped, and the captain, whom Coast Guard Commander R. S. Patch of Woods Hole described as "very reliable," said he had been anchored at Deep Hole, off Harwichport, on the day of the abduction. There was nothing suspicious and no boat moved out of the harbor, the captain said. The day was clear until night, when a heavy fog set in. At that time, however, the alarm had been spread.

While the McMath family, guided by the mode of operations used in the Lindbergh case, extended indefinitely the embargo on a police guard of their house, the authorities went ahead along their own lines in searching for the malefactors.

It was learned that the theory has been adopted that the so-called colored man driving the abduction car was known to "Peggy" McMath.

This theory was reached, it was understood, at a conference of state police at the Melrose Inn, Harwichport, which lasted from 11 o'clock last night to early this morning.

Police Believe Peggy Knew the Car Driver

At the conclusion State Detectives Albert Brouillard and Michael Barrett pushed out in an auto into the heavy fog which mantled the town, and returned an hour and a half later. They said they were simply checking details and that there were no new clues.

It was learned however, the state police placed considerable weight on the theory that little Peggy knew the man driving the car which whisked her out of the ken of her family and friends. This police believe, it was understood, was demonstrated by her willingness to enter the machine, despite a momentary hesitancy at first.

The theory was believed strengthened by the man's apparent familiarity with the recess hour at the school, and with the names of the teachers together with the secretary to the superintendent, Miss Ruth C. Holmes.

The authorities also believe that Peggy, considered to be a bright child, would not have entered the car without a protest, unless she knew the operator. This, in spite of the suggestion which is being considered, that the man was blacked up to resemble a Negro. If this was true, police believe the child perceived the disguise, and recognized the man as someone with whom she was apparently well acquainted.

The start of the searching parties followed a night of activity on the part of the state police, during which a thick, greasy fog hushed the town. Under Gen. Needham's direction a radio receiving and dispatching outfit was set up in the Harwich police station, with light for the outside work furnished by a fire truck equipped with powerful searchlights.

Gen. Needham, who arrived at Harwichport yesterday, said:

Secret Service Men Hunt Detroit Gangster

"Every resource of the state police and the state detectives bureau is at the disposal of the McMath family. We will do our utmost to aid them in every way possible."

This is his first big case since Gen. Needham was appointed commissioner of public safety a short time ago. In addition to his strong desire as a police official to bring the case to a successful conclusion, he is also animated by the fact that he himself is the father of two children. His daughter is a little older than Peggy McMath, and his son is younger.

Meantime active search for gangsters who may have kidnaped the McMath child is being made in New York and Detroit, while police of practically every city and town in the country are on the watch.

The Lindbergh case was definitely linked with the McMath abduction by the presence in Harwichport of two secret service men. They were assigned to run down the kidnapers and thereby end the famous aviator's child, by direct order of the then President Hoover.

These operatives it was learned, went to the Cape originally, seeking Lee Cellura, known as "Black Leo," and described by them as a former member of the Detroit Purple Gang, which inaugurated the modern "racket" of "snatching." Cellura had been seen in Sagamore and was said to have been engaged in rum running on the Cape.

Immediately following the kidnaping of Peggy McMath, chief the secret service men hurried to Harwichport to determine if possible whether her abductors were the same as involved in the Lindbergh case, and to lend their aid.

At an earlier press conference Lee definitely stated that the 48-hour embargo on the police guard around the McMath home had been extended indefinitely. He reiterated the statement that the family will place no obstacles in the way of the kidnapers if they wish to establish a contact.

The spokesman again stated that McMath is not wealthy, and that on the contrary the family is "broke."

A dramatic touch was injected into the conference when Lee said that on several occasions since last February the McMath servants had used their own money to purchase food for the household, despite the fact they have taken 25 per cent cuts.

This was brought out when he was asked the names of the servants, but refused to give them, explaining the family has implicit faith in them.

Kidnapers Free to Go to McMath Home

All night lights burned in three rooms in the rambling white house, shining dimly through the window panes into the fog. This is in accordance with the announcement of the McMaths that the house will be open day and night for any messenger from those who spirited away their daughter.

John Shaughnessy, most important eye witness in the case, was not permitted to go to school today. The boy is staying with relatives in order that he may not be molested.

A revised version of his story, given out by the police, shows it to be of the utmost importance. The boy was the last pupil to enter the school at the conclusion of a recess which lasted from 1:30 p. m. to 2:15. As he entered the door a man in a car parked nearby called to him. Young Shaughnessy ran to the car, the right front door of which was open, and jumped on the running board. The driver, he said, was a colored man who talked with what he called a Southern accent.

"Tell Peggy McMath the car is waiting," this man said.

Apparently he was the man who had previously telephoned the school from Chatham claiming to be Mr. McMath, and stating he was sending a car for Peggy.

Young Shaughnessy ran into school and delivered the message, and then returned. He said that when Peggy emerged she walked to the automobile and put one foot on the running board.

"Get in," the driver said, according to the boy, who added that the girl hesitated.

Then, he said, the driver repeated his command and as Peggy stepped in he closed the door behind her. The boy said she turned her face partially toward him and he could see that she had started to cry.

Just as the machine got under way the engine stalled and Shaughnessy said he heard the driver shout: "Shut up." Then the car drove away.

According to the boy the first two numbers on the license plate were the figures 16. The series issued to motorists on that part of the Cape starts with 160,000.

Police Watch for Sport Sedan

State police early today sent out a teletype message to the effect that Attleboro police last Thursday or Friday stopped a 16-cylinder Cadillac sport model sedan with yellow wheels, the occupants of which asked the way to Commonwealth ave., Boston. The car bore New York registration plates numbered T Y 8443, and was driven by a colored chauffeur who gave his name as James Neuson of 230 W. 60th st., New York. One of two white men in the car gave his name as M. L. Weiss of 1694 Broadway, N. Y. The machine was said to be owned by Harry Roth of New York.

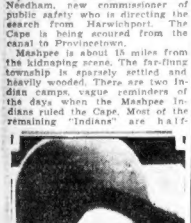
The teletype message asked all police to be on the watch for this car.

POLICE MASS FOR INTENSIVE CAPE KIDNAPER HUNT

E. J. SHERLOCK JOSEPH FERRARI JAMES HUGHES CHIEF HALL

MICHAEL BARRETT AL BROUILLARD ERNEST BRADFORD DANIEL NEEDHAM

In a midnight conference in Harwichport's Melrose Inn, the forces of the law planned their campaign for the recovery of Margaret McMath and the apprehension of her kidnapers. The chief strategists were Gen. Daniel Needham, head of the state police, and Chief Emilius Hall of Harwich. The man-hunters decided that the little girl was abducted by someone known to her, thus getting a definite line to follow. All those pictured are state detectives—except Hall and Needham. When the conference ended in the wee small hours, state detectives sped out into the misty night, but returned without a word about their errand. Federal secret service men who took part in the search for the Lindbergh baby were on the Cape. It is said they are seeking Black Leo Cellura of Detroit's notorious Purple Gang of killers, kidnapers, rum runners and racketeers.



APPEALS FOR GIRL

Mrs. Margaret Kuhn McMath, mother of kidnaped "Peggy" McMath, was near collapse at her Harwichport home. She appealed to the kidnapers of the child to be "good to her daughter."

Keep a Watch for Kidnaper, Gang Car and Victim

THE VICTIM—Here is a revised description of Margaret "Peggy" McMath, kidnaped from school in Harwichport two days ago: Weight, 74 pounds; height, 4 feet; eyes, black; hair, black bobbed, covering prominent ears; brown oxford shoes, tan rolled socks.

HER CLOTHING—Cotton dress, orange and black in color, buttoned in front, short sleeves, white collar and cuffs, white plain buttons. Tag inside dress read L. F. Hollander & Co. Short blue coat, three brass buttons. Coat quite well worn. Tag inside coat read, Made in England. Light tan cotton bloomers, one-piece cotton knitted undergarment, gold finger ring with brown stone, blue lunch box containing thermos bottle.

THE KIDNAPER—Here is a revised description of the driver of the auto in which Margaret McMath was kidnaped: Age, about 35; heighth, 5 feet 8 inches; weight, 150 pounds; thin build; color very black. (Not a natural black in the opinion of two persons who saw him.)

THE AUTO—Watch for this car used in the abduction of Margaret McMath: Large sedan, apparently an old model, dark blue in color. Believed to carry Massachusetts registration plates. Also believed to have natural wood wheels. First two registration numbers 16, of the series issued to car owners in Cape Cod district.

If you see the child, kidnapers or this car communicate immediately with the City Editor of the Boston Evening American, Liberty 4000.

Roth's Auto With Negro Driver Traced in Cape Kidnaping

Whether the McMath kidnaping was a gang job for ransom, a cruel act of revenge for some real or fancied wrong, or the act of a demented person or persons, perhaps believed in the voodoo rites which is practised in various settlements on the Cape, had not been established today.

"Black Leo" Cellura, fugitive Detroit gangster, who slipped a federal trap at Sagamore in February, is one man badly wanted by the authorities.

Another is Harry Roth, formerly of Revere and Roslindale, a Cape rum runner. Roth served time for rum running in 1926, after being caught with a load of liquor in Middlesex County. He ran his car into the Cambridge patrol car parked across Memorial Drive in an effort to head him off.

He is wanted in this instance because of a strange coincidence reported to the State police by the Attleboro authorities who on Thursday or Friday stopped a 16-cylinder Cadillac car, driven by a negro chauffeur and containing two white men.

The car was a sport-model sedan with yellow wheels. It bore New York registration plates issued to a Harry Roth. The chauffeur said he was James Neuson of 230 W. 60th st., New York, and one of the white men was M. L. Weiss of 1694 Broadway, New York.

The occupants asked how to get to Commonwealth ave., Boston.

The kidnap car had yellow wheels. On Tuesday, in Cambridge, such a car, driven by a negro and containing two white men, was reported by a Somerville woman from whom the occupants asked the way to Commonwealth ave., Boston.

Capt. Bligh of the state police said he had asked that the car be stopped if seen and that he had asked New York for a picture of the chauffeur. Neuson, which will be sent to Harwich for possible identification. He has also sent a picture of Roth to Attleboro to determine whether this man was in the car seen there.

CONANT LOOMS AS PRESIDENT

The name of Prof. James Bryant Conant, 40, head of the division of chemistry at Harvard, came rapidly to the fore today as a possible successor to A. Lawrence Lowell as president of the university.

Until the present time the candidate most prominently mentioned for the post was Dean Kenneth B. Murdock of the faculty of arts and sciences. Others whose names have been mentioned include Dr Roger I. Lee, of Boston, and Granville Clark, retired New York attorney and a member of the Harvard corporation.

Today, however, credible reports have it that the Harvard corporation agreed on the name of Prof Conant as President Lowell's successor at its last meeting. It is believed his name will be presented formally to the board of overseers, which ratifies the choice, at their next meeting May 8.

London, May 4 (AP)—Lady Evelyn Cobbold is the first Englishwoman to attain the Moslem title of "Hadji." In pilgrimage to Mecca, the Holy City, she performed the religious ceremonies of circumambulating the Holy Kaaba seven times and visiting the well Zem-Zem. Lady Evelyn, a sister of the Earl of Dunmore, lord-in-waiting to the king, has been a Moslem many years.

Student Pacifists No True Index Of Feeling

By GILBERT SELDES

Ever since the members of the Oxford Union declared that they would "in no circumstances fight for king and country" students in the British Empire and in America have been voting on the question, and a large total for absolute pacifism has been rolled up. It is worth thinking about, and I mean no disrespect for undergraduates when I say that the vote may be impressive, but it is fundamentally insignificant. The wrong people are voting; they do not know what they are voting on—in the serious sense that they have never experienced what they say they will never try and have never experienced the emotions generated when war threatens. The votes are a reflection—but only a reflection—of two things: the international pacifist movement and the universal bad taste left by the last war. The second of these is by far the more important element, and a vote of importance would be one in which every ex-soldier of the World War participated. This is paradoxical enough, for these ex-soldiers will soon be over the age of action and the students are just coming into the draft limits. Yet the vote of those who will soon be safe from service will tell us more of what the world today really thinks of war.

GILBERT SELDES

Next Time

In the army in 1918 men used to say, "They'll fight the next one without me," using stronger language at times to make it emphatic; I heard the sentiment more often in camps in America than in the streets of Paris, where men were having a lordly time and the rancor against "shavetails" had died away. I should make a guess that if war threatened now, even a part of the Bonus Army would enlist—but not all. The heaviest blow to propaganda was delivered when prepayment of the bonus was refused and the pensions to veterans were cut down. Yet no sure way has yet been discovered of keeping men out of war.

We know now that war does not pay the victors; it has never paid the victims (except Austria, which used to thrive on defeat); and it doesn't pay the soldiers. But a thousand circumstances still conspire to make war more attractive to men than any civilian occupation. Pacifists who rail against the drilling and regimentation of soldiers and say that militarism kills the individual, never recognize the tremendous elation, the irresponsibility and the freedom of army life. It was not only a joke that men enjoyed the army because they were away from their homes; and homes in the past three years have not been so comforting and gay.

* * *

There assembled at one of the tables at the Opera Ball the other night a nice little party headed by Lorraine Manville Gould. Edmond J. O'Brien was one of the group and with him, among others, were the talented Sheila Barrett and Vincent Lopez. Now, what it was that inspired the Gould lass to say it, I don't know—but she chirped haughtily to O'Brien, "Heavens, this table is crowded with stage persons, don't you think? It's annoying!" Whereupon most of the party rose and left, and the day before yesterday O'Brien sent the gal a check for $20 to cover her fine champagne she had contributed. I mean it's all very funny because, if you recall, Lorraine Manville wedded a lad of the chorus named Jay Gould and nobody held it against her—or him either, for that matter. It was just one of the pretty romances of Broadway and Park Avenue at the time. O hum!

Questions for Students

This makes me wonder whether the young students who are voting never to bear arms will also vote never to do any of the things which make wars inevitable. Will they take an oath that they will not go into business which leads to exports? Will they swear never to use rubber and oil, for which nations quarrel? Will they refuse to enter into competition with foreign firms for trade in Africa, China and the Argentine? Will they (if they are Germans) prefer to let Germany capture Poland or (if they are, Poles) prefer to let Poland subjugate a few million Germans?

Going further, will they swear never to try to over-reach their fellowmen at home or try to become richer than the poorest of their neighbors? Will they refuse to subscribe to foreign loans which pay 8 per cent when domestic bonds are paying only 5 per cent? And will they be willing to let the standard of living—their own living—sink to the level of Rumania perhaps? Will they throw away all wealth and prosperity and preach a crusade of non-resistance and non-aggression not only in war, but in commerce and industry? In short, will they recognize that war is not a special activity which happens to man but an instrument in an eternal warfare, for which peace is only a deceptive covering?

SCOOTERS . . . skates . . . baseballs . . . hundreds of things keep youngsters on the go. They need energy. They want strength. And Kellogg's PEP Bran Flakes are their food.

PEP has the famous Kellogg flavor — better bran flakes. Crisp. Fresh. Packed with nourishment of wheat. Plus enough bran to be mildly laxative.

Enjoy PEP often. Delicious with milk or cream. Buy a package today from your grocer. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

POLICE SILENT ABOUT BREAKS

Residents of the Mattapan section of Milton are disturbed over a number of house breaks and reports are being kept quiet by the police.

A resident who wished his name withheld gave the information today, saying he thought residents would be less uneasy if they knew to what extent burglaries were going on.

At least two breaks were reported. Mrs. Clarence Haines, Eliot st., said a thief had visited her house twice. Once he took jewelry and a watch, and another time left fingerprints, she said.

Other breaks were reported at the home of Mrs. Mary Knight, Brook rd., and Mrs. Cavanagh, Blue Hill ave.

Milton police were reticent of the breaks. One officer called the Knight break, last Saturday, "ancient history."

Another officer said the police "did not advertise breaks." He refused to tell his name.

"I don't care what they told you. The whole thing is exaggerated," was the reaction of Chief Travers.

...ATE TAX ON SPEAKEASIES IS URGED

De luxe speakeasies which are springing up in Boston today face the possibility of being taxed by the State as corporations.

Henry F. Long, State tax commissioner, declares the speakeasies could and should be taxed under their legal status as incorporated clubs. Senator Henry Parkman, chairman of the Senate committee on taxation, declared his group was probing methods whereby the State could secure part of the tremendous although technically illegal speakeasy revenue.

Both made it plain, however, that they were interested in the situation only to the end of securing additional revenue. They declared their interest was not extended to closing or harassing the speakeasies.

Commr. Long declared that it would be necessary to tax speakeasies as corporations if they continued to increase at the present speed. He said all that was necessary was the enactment of a brief law stipulating that all incorporated clubs pay a tax in accordance with the revenue received unless it can be shown the revenue is used solely for charitable purposes.

He said if the number of speakeasies increased considerably during the next few months he would draft such a measure himself and present it to the Legislature. He said in the past few weeks he had signed incorporation papers for clubs at the rate of 30 a day.

Senator Parkman declared the taxation would be legal in that it would be based on legally secured incorporation papers. Taxes of 2 and 1 per cent on gross receipts have been suggested. It is understood the larger of the new clubs are securing a gross income of $2000 a night which in annual revenue would bring the state about $14,000 a year from one speakeasy.

President Roosevelt Cancels Air Address Scheduled Tonight From Washington

By N. F. T.

Keeping one ear on the ground and the other in the air isn't a particularly graceful pose to be sure, but a flash of fact in the "colyum" is and always was worth two in the wind. Then too, putting pride in ones pocket keeps said spacious trousers receptacle from being entirely empty. About now, the radio waves bear comparison to ocean waves in a way. Outwardly all appears exceptionally placid and calm, yet there's much going on beneath the surface.

* * *

Sound sanctum headquarters of both chain systems in New York (NBC and CBS) are busy planning special studio shows to supplant bushels of bought and paid for broadcasting due to disappear from dialdom between now and mid-summer. Classic short stories penned by Edgar Allen Poe and Guy De Maupassant are on the Columbia Network schedule. These to be announced in detail very shortly.

* * *

President Roosevelt is not broadcasting tonight as per the original United States Chamber of Commerce plan in Washington. Presumably other vital addresses is given as the reason for cancellation of the Presidential address. The same was to have come through New England over WEEI and WNAC waves at 11:30 p. m.

* * *

WORD FROM WEST

Morton Downey doing business with big brewery for a 13-week radio song series. Mort may be paid in stock shares rather than by salary, which means he is rumored as declaring O-Kay.

* * *

John and Lionel Barrymore wanted for most impressive drama spectacle ever conceived for coast to coast presentation.

* * *

EASTERN EFFORT

Those "Magic Carpet" programs roll up and off June 29, after a steady weekly run of almost five years. Thus the biggest cigarette customer the "mike" moguls have goes into summer seclusion.

* * *

George "Greek Ambassador" Givot took his turn with Warings Pensylvanians last night (WNAC) at 10 o'clock, leaving the feature character spot to "Mandy Lou" and her darky monologue material. Comment on that from this critical camp, is just plain—Not so good.

* * *

Ed Wynn sponsors want his goofy ash to go on all summer and Ed the "Perfect Fool" expresses no objection. So shall his clowning continue, with siren, Mr. McNamee and all.

* * *

BOSTON BITS

James (Jimmy) Melton, the popular tenor was to be the Metropolitan Theater attraction this coming Sunday afternoon and evening, but certain hitches developed. However, an equally well known loudspeaker personality appears there in the flesh that day—it's jolly Johnny Marvin.

* * *

Considerable resentment on the part of parents has reached program planners in connection with staging "thrillers" full of screams and weird shrieks that actually frighten youngsters. Great news, pretty posies and plentiful praises for the Mamas and Papas.

UTILITIES WAR ON NEW TAX

An increase of $500,000 will be necessary in the state budget unless the bill providing for discontinuance of income tax exemption on dividends of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Co., American Telephone and Telegraph Co., and Western Union is passed, according to Tax Commr. Henry F. Long.

The House ways and means committee of the Legislature held a hearing on the bill with Commr. Long urging favorable action. Charles P. Pierce, vice-president of the New England company, opposed the measure in so far as it affected Massachusetts holders of the stock and asked that they be exempted from the provisions of the bill.

Commr. Long explained that under a gentleman's agreement the telephone has paid the State a large sum annually in place of the local taxation of company dividends but that the company does not feel it can pursue this policy any longer.

He then pointed out that the State budget had been made up on the assumption the bill would pass and the State have the extra money provides. If it failed to pass some method would have to be found to raise approximately $500,000. He said the estimated revenue from the bill would take care of the loss of revenue from the ending of the gentlemen's agreement.

Pierce pointed out that the New England company, paying a State franchise tax, was taxed in a different manner from the American company and that the system under which the New England Company was levied was similar to the method of taxing State domestic corporations.

"I saw Gandhi in Yeroda jail two days ago," she said, "and made a clean confession to him of my past life. I now want to lead a new life in accordance with the teachings of Gandhi."

Politician Quits; News

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

When a man bites a hot dog that ain't news unless the mustard gets in his eye.

But when a prominent politician like Joseph McKee quits politics to go to work, that is an eight-column banner in the sky.

Joe was New York's acting mayor for a few shakes of the lamb's tail. He was president of the board of aldermen. He was going to run for mayor this fall.

Uncle Joe Cannon said that few die and none resign. Throw those old proverbs around long enough and they will turn up aceedeuce.

He's going into the real estate business. With real estate in its present condition that gives Joe a chance to grow up with America.

And a word about that name on the glass door, Mr. McKee. Paint it yourself. Don't forget that $0,000 people spelled it wrong at the last election.

College Tax Asked

A bill to tax Harvard and other colleges in Cambridge has been filed by Rep. Joseph F. Cleary, of that city, who declares that the added revenue would reduce the tax rate to $18.

Thrilling Romance of Hollywood Today

By Robert Terry Shannon

Shabby Stranger, Seeking Leni, Proves to Be the Husband of Brilliant Star

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Attending the premiere of her latest motion picture, beautiful Leni Luneska, the star, is confronted by a shabby, emaciated man, who emerges from the crowd crying, "Leni! It is I, Karl Kruger. Do you want me to tell the whole world?" Leni turns white. She tells the man she will talk with him inside. Lucky Cavanaugh, a gambler, fascinated by Leni's beauty, saunters into the theater after Kruger. He prevents Kruger from making a scene and has him placed in a private office until after the show. Cavanaugh then bribes an usher to seat him in Leni's box. During the performance, Douglas Gates, Leni's elderly escort, proposes to her. She is tempted to accept him to get away from everything.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 3

"I'm afraid you are too thrilled with success to listen to me," he half smiled, "but I shall try to be patient."

Leni touched his hand. "Thank you, my dear," she said softly, "You are so nice."

So nice and nothing more, thought Leni in her tense heart. The touch of his hand gave her no strength. Tonight it was strength she needed to face Karl Kruger: vigor of mind and courageous wisdom.

There must be no giving way to blind despair, no surrendering to panic that paralyzes clear thinking. By an immense effort of the will it would be necessary to gather her forces for the ordeal. And the sooner the better. It would be dangerous to avoid seeing Kruger. She would have to face him immediately and forestall by whatever means possible the menace spawning in his murky brain.

On the stage the army of dancers, amid an orchestral tempest, had finished their eccentric ballad in a whirlwind of shimmering spangles and gyrating legs and arms. The immense velvet curtains closed and, in changing lights, the motion picture screen had filled the aperture. All over the theater the audiences was giving a concentrated attention to the title and the screen credit and the lettered names of the cast. For almost two hours this attention would not be interrupted.

"I am going to slip out of the box for a little while," Leni said to Gates, drawing her cloak around her shoulders. "Please—I want to be alone."

HE STOOD ASIDE

To Gates this was a display of impetuous temperament which he was too polite to combat. He rose and stood aside; the small rustle of her leavings distracted no one's attention. Leni's talking ghost on the screen already had achieved a recognition that absorbed all interest from its human original.

The fictitious drama created by an industrious scenario writer was cleverly beginning to weave its spell of apparent reality as the living Leni Luneska, unseen and unconsidered, tiptoed up a darkened side aisle to an obscure rendezvous where pen and fumed moved swiftly toward fatal collision.

Lucky Cavanaugh turned his head and watched her until she disappeared. Then he turned and saw her again on the screen, while a trace of the fragrance she wore still lingered in the box.

The office into which Karl Kruger had been led was one of several on the second floor above the foyer. By day it was used by the press agent and was luxurious in the Hollywood tradition with thick rugs, mahogany and leather.

DETAILS PLANNED

Quite different, indeed, from the adjoining room to which a connecting door led. Next door there was nothing of swank. An adding machine on a plain table, several chairs, a stack of ledgers and a substantial steel safe were about all. The door of the safe was swung open and a serious-looking man knelt before it. On the floor beside him was the night's receipts, the paper currency in banded sheafs and the silver in two canvas bags.

The man on the floor was not a burglar. He was the theatre treasurer and he was about to lock up the money carefully for the night.

The real burglars, who were equally methodical, lurked behind the last row of seats in the gallery.

They were dressed in the uniforms of ushers and had crawled down from the roof. Their undertaking was precarious but they had left very little to chance. Every detail had been planned to theoretical perfection.

Outside a side door downstairs there was a third, also disguised as an usher, who was the look-out. He resembled somewhat that genuine article who might have sneaked out to drag on a cigarette.

According to the burglar's plans the room adjoining the treasurer's office should have been empty, but no safe-blowers, however foresighted, could have predicted the catapulting of Karl Kruger into the scheme. Nor, for that matter, Leni Luneska, who made inquiries and was escorted by the house manager himself to the room occupied by the waiting Kruger. These events annoyed but did not dissuade the determined safe experts.

The treasurer had locked the office and gone. So far, so good. It was child's play for the robbers to enter the office with a skeleton key and wait, still as mice in the dark, until the unexpected conference next door broke up. The wall was thick and the connecting door heavy. Kruger's and Leni's voices were but dim babbles. In any case more than an hour remained before it would be time to ex, lode the safe.

EXPLOSION TIMED

This explosion was to be a matter of accurate timing, a feat without precedent. Leni's screen picture was called "Madelon" and it dealt with the story of a little French coeotte who followed her pollu into the trenches in 1914. In the sixth reel, the picture reached its climax during a terrific bombardment from German heavy artillery.

At a preview in Santa Barbara the previous week the sound effect had been so violent the audience was deafened. Windows had rattled and chandeliers shaken. It was the loudest bombardment ever screened and a mere safe blowing, to be let loose at its height, would attract no more attention than a pop gun in a boiler factory.

Kruger, sitting deep in the comfort of a leather chair, did not see when Leni entered. Without moving he looked at her strained face. One of her hands clutched the opera cloak over her breast, the fur brushing her smooth neck.

"Shut the door!" said Kruger, without removing the cigarette from his mouth. "What's the matter—afraid I'm going to bite you?"

She stood gazing at him without speaking while a little dark pool formed between her eyes where the faintly penciled brows drew together. The cloak rose and fell visibly with her breathing. Kruger, too, was affected despite his effort to domineering; a dark vein in his temple throbbed with a steady beat.

VOICE WAS LOW

"What are you doing here? What do you want of me?" Leni asked.

Her voice was low and almost polite.

Kruger nervously threw his cigarette to the rug and straightened forward aggressively.

"You know very well what I want," said Kruger loudly. "You—in your fine feathers—you wish I hadn't showed up, hey? It is not pleasant to have a starving bum hanging around in his rags, is it? No—oh, no! Not when he happens to be your husband! It would be an nice and convenient to forget all about Karl Kruger, wouldn't it?"

Leni's breathing was difficult and she had a cold sickness in her breast. Crack-brained and egotistical, this man had it in his power to poison her whole life.

He could reach up with his dirty hand and pull her down again into the mud and despair from which she had climbed by the almost superhuman force of her own will —by the soul-drive of her own revolt against the shame and misery of a haunting past.

The tense interview that Leni has with her husband, while burglars wait in the next room to crash the safe, makes tomorrow's installment outstanding as one of the most dramatic scenes ever conceived by Robert Terry Shannon, the talented author. Don't miss it!

"What's the matter—afraid I'm going to bite you?" said Kruger without removing the cigarette from his mouth.

Tour Shows Business on Up Grade Again

At a meeting of 75 local dealers at 178 Tremont st, Edward C. Bonis, president and general manager of the New England Distributing Company, who has just returned from a trip through the New England territory, conducting sales and merchandising meetings with the dealers in the different sections, said that he found that the dealers were much more optimistic now than they have been for the past three years, and that the dealers who are going out after the business are actually showing an increase over last year's volume of refrigeration. The sales of his organization have increased 300 per cent over the same period of last year, he said.

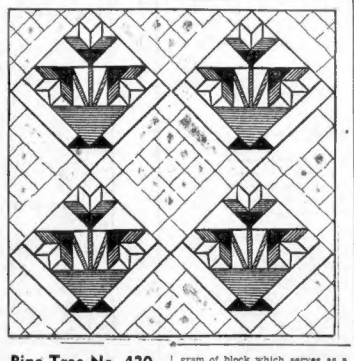
PATCHWORK QUILT

By LAURA WHEELER



Pine Tree No. 420

THE UNITED STATES abounds in pine trees from coast to coast. The predominance of this tree in the colony caused its extensive use as a symbol in flags and later in state seals. It is no wonder then that the Colonial needlewoman pieced her scraps of material to form a patchwork picture of a pine tree. This pattern was not limited to any state or section, but appeared in all the 13 states. Its popularity was well deserved, and has continued until today, because it is a simple block to make, and an effective quilt when finished.

The pattern comes to you with complete simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, quilting motif, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10 cents for a pattern of this design to Boston Evening American Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth ave., New York city.

BOOKS—And a Number of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

It is notorious that humorists, like doctors, often disagree. Therefore, one looks into the fascinating volume which Hewitt H. Howland has edited, called "Humor by Vote" (McBride), with more than usual interest for here we find 30 men and women, labeled "modern authorities," selecting the humor of the Mark Twain era which has most appealed to them.

There are surprises awaiting one. Would you have expected Frank Sullivan, for example, to have chosen Lewis Carroll's "Mad Tea Party"? It contains some of the mild insanity for which Mr. Sullivan himself is famous; so perhaps it is a logical selection, after all. But you would hardly have expected the gay Baird Leonard of caring for Bill Nye's "My Dog." It seems a curious bit of picking for such a modern.

Others, like Elmer Davis, hark back to Artemus Ward; McCready Huston to Eugene Field; Rollin Kirby to Peter Finley Dunne; Ring Lardner to George Ade; Don Marquis to Dickens—Pickwick, of course; Edgar Lee Masters to Josh Billings, and Ogden Nash to F. C. Burnand—one of the oldest selection of all; Chic Sale to Ellis Parker Butler; Booth Tarkington to Stanley Huntley, a really amusing choice, call "The Lot Shirt Stud," with a happy twist at the end. And so on.

• • •

The result is a compilation of extraordinary value. The older and established humorists have won hands down. Carolyn Wells did not forget Gelett Burgess and his immortal Purple Cow; and Homer Croy remembered the horse trade scene in "David Harum," which surely remains one of the gems of humor bequeathed us from a previous generation. It is good to find Margaret Fishback recalling Guy Wetmore Carryl's "Sophisticated Fox and the Gullible Raven," with that unforgettable final stanza which has rarely been matched for cleverness:

"The Moral is, a Fox is bound
To be a shameless sinner,
And also: When the cheese comes round
You know it's after dinner.
But (what is only known to few)
The Fox is after dinner, too."

• • •

One might have guessed that verses like Sam Walter Foss' "The Prayer of Cyrus Brown" would appeal to Arthur Guiterman; but surely Ellis Parker Butler might have found something better to select than Robert J. Burdette's "The Romance of the Carpet," with its fase rhymes and rather archaic humor.

Marc Connelly chooses a short story by Owen Johnson from "The Prodigious Hickey," which remains a minor classic—would that Mr. Johnson would give us more of his imperishable boy stories; and Irvin Cobb re-introduces us to an old and almost forgotten humorist, George W. Harris, who like his quaint dialect, brings many a laugh. H. C. Bunner is not forgotten, thank Heaven. His "Nice People" has been revived by no less an authority than George Ade.

A rollicking book, this—exactly the thing to give to a friend about to go on a journey. A trip is bound to be all the pleasanter with it as a companion in a steamer chair.

WHAT STOMACH ACIDITY IS AND WHAT YOU CAN DO ABOUT IT

According to many authorities, some 80% of the people of today have acid stomach. This because so many foods, comprising the modern diet, are acid forming foods.

It usually makes itself felt in sour stomach, indigestion, headaches, nausea, "gas," "biliousness," and most frequently in stomach pains that come about thirty minutes after eating. So you can easily tell if you have it.

Now Quickly and Easily Corrected

If you do have acid stomach, don't worry about it. You can correct it in a very simple manner. Just do this. It will alkalize your acid soaked stomach almost immediately. You will feel like another person.

TAKE—2 teaspoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia with a glass of water every morning when you get up. Take another teaspoonful thirty minutes after eating. And another before you go to bed.

What This Does

That's all you do. But you do it regularly, EVERY DAY, so long as you have any symptoms of distress.

This acts to neutralize the stomach acids that foster your "upset" stomach, that invite headaches and that feeling of lassitude and lost energy.

Try it. Results will amaze you. Your head will be clear. You'll forget you have a stomach.

BUT—be careful that you get REAL milk of magnesia when you buy; genuine PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia. See that the name "Phillips" is stamped clearly on the label.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

WHAT FUN WAS HAD BY ALL AT THE Back Alley Fair yesterday . . . in their aprons and smocks you would hardly have recognized Boston's fine families as they vended their wares, served hot dogs and beer and barked you into their fascinating stalls . . .

We had a riotous time at the Caledonian Market and came out laden with a bridge table, two picture frames, a safety razor sharpener, some cutlery and two pairs of snow-shoes . . . which gives you some idea of the diversity of the articles collected for sale. We bid as high as a dollar on a silk shawl and much higher on a water-color of old Venice . . . we lost them to a stout lady and a very thin man, but did we have FUN?

ELEANOR JONES

Mrs. H. Parker Whittington in a bright red smock and a real sun tan looked like a wise gypsy as she sat at a table taking in the doubloons . . . and we thought that here was one woman who can adapt herself to any surroundings and fit gracefully into the picture. She wasn't the least bit self-conscious as she bartered her wares, and let me add she never lost a sale . . . in the good old Boston Musicale spirit, she landed her customer every time. Likewise, she gave us all our money's worth and the day was brighter for our visit with her.

Mrs. J. Mott Hallowell was in charge of the amusement stall with the assistance of her attractive family, Benjamin and his sweet wife, Missy, and daughter, Nancy Heckscher. Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Richard Heckscher (and we do not dare to leave out one initial) are motoring on to the World's Fair in Chicago this summer after they spend a month at Wianno with Mrs. Hallowell. They will spend the month of August in the Windy City and come back through the Shenandoah Valley with a visit with Mr. Heckscher's family in Philadelphia. As J. G. Richard is graduating from Harvard in June, no doubt he will be job-hunting after such a delightful summer when he returns.

* * *

Planning Trip Abroad

IT WAS WARM SPORT TRYING to hit the cocoanut with baseballs but we persisted until we won a prize . . . a tin badge. Those two lovely Fair Things, Jane Wheeler and Mary Jane Bigelow, were in charge of this booth and they were passing the time between shots painting faces on the cocoanuts.

We met sister Elizabeth Wheeler in the beer garden drinking tomato juice cocktails and, on inquiry, she told us she hopes to make enough money in the real estate business this spring to pay for a jaunt over the Big Pond this summer . . . you can travel on cargo boats for less than a hundred dollars, but it takes six weeks to get across, would that interest anybody?

Petite Dorothy (Bunny) Stone and vivacious Eleanor Jones were peddling books from a gayly decorated cart and in their quaint costumes and embroidered aprons they were a picture . . . Eleanor is venturing into business with a group of young society girls trying to arouse interest in subscriptions to a popular magazine . . . the enthusiasm these girls show for a job is simply amazing.

Quite the most intriguing costume worn at the fair was that of Eugenia Frothingham's, a Basque affair with the most enormous hat imaginable. Eugenia is as interesting as her costume and we wish she had entertained us with a dance on the green to the tune of the "Street Singer" and his accordion . . . she dances beautifully.

* * *

In Picturesque Costume

IN BROAD BRIMMED HAT, PAISLEY costume and a charming smile, Grace Cushing was the object of much admiration . . . bizarre dress suits her very much better than conventional street attire. She is a very pretty girl and needs the picturesque to offset her demure manner.

A darling little girl in light bobbed hair and navy blue sailor was Virginia Vogel, a debutante of a future day, with her friend of the sweet dark eyes, Henrietta Jones . . . some day the stage will run after these two pretty girls.

Mrs. Charles Hammond sold smocks and garden things and a cheery lady she always is to meet . . . we wonder if the young things of today will ever be the delightful woman of the future that Mrs. Hammond is, so humorous, so kind and wholesouled.

Miss Elizabeth Leland was on hand as she usually is at all worthy affairs . . . in a smart tailleur.

Betty Bartlett, too, came to buy and not to sell, in a new spring street costume . . . she is very striking with her large dark eyes and raven tresses.

Pretty Mary Haskell served tea in the garden and Alice Newell strolled about with cigarettes and peanuts . . .

The coffers of the Farm and Garden Shop must have jingled with the many coins gathered in by the Back Alley Fair and Mrs. Walter Resor and her committee must be busy counting their gains today.

There are still a few tickets left.

SOCIETY FROLICS AT BACK ALLEY FAIR HELD FOR CHARITY

WITH ALL THE COLOR and atmosphere that made its inauguration last year one of society's outstanding events, the annual Back Alley Fair again drew young and old to the alley between Exeter and Fairfield sts., yesterday afternoon. Fascinating stalls lined the alley and many of society's fairest members donned picturesque costumes to serve the fair patrons. At the left is pictured Miss Eugenia Frothingham in Basque garb, one of the most intriguing costumes worn at the fair. On the right in a Paisley costume with broad brimmed hat is Miss Grace Cushing snapped as she vended her wares. Miss Elizabeth Wheeler, drinking tomato cocktail with Mrs. J. G. Richard Heckscher in the beer garden are shown in the photo below, while Mrs. Henry Barr serves them. Society had a lot of fun at the fair and the Farm and Garden Association realized a nice fat sum. One of the features of the Back Alley Fair was the Caledonian market which was patterned after the famous market in London. Boston Evening American photos.

Latest Notes of the Fashionables

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

THERE ARE TWO PREDOMINATING styles to be noticed in this spring outfit; one is the presence of many shades of blue, the other is striking and attractive check and Scotch plaid. For instance, have you seen the attractive garb worn by Mrs. Robert H. Stevenson of Beacon st.? Her skirt is of bright red and green plaid mixture, while her short Norfolk jacket of navy blue matches a beret hat, also trimmed with touches of plaid.

Miss Katherine Davis has a smart brown and white striped woolen dress with a cravat collar and snappy hat trimmed with white. So many of the hats reflect the little white piqued bow.

Miss Elizabeth Thomas wears a black beret topped off with a saucy bow, a black and white sport plaid dress and a coatee of bright red, exceedingly striking and attractive on her.

Mrs. James Carter also favors the dark blue. An attractive brimmed hat with a dainty white bow directly in front matches her white collar and gloves. Before her marriage she was Miss Juliet Green.

Mrs. Frances Fiske of Cambridge wears a smart ensemble with the new and stylish cape effect, nor does she neglect the smart white trimmings of collar and cuffs.

FORMAL AFTERNOON CLOTHES ARE TOO OFTEN CONFUSED WITH EVENING GOWNS

Daytime Lengths Are Rule for Guests Attending Early Morning Weddings

By Margaret Matson

THIS IS THE TIME of year when questions concerning the suitability of clothes to occasion get most confusing. Weddings, formal and informal, occurring at different times during the day; reunions and alumnae teas, dinners and dances—and warm weather. Perhaps the latter is what makes for the confusion. In the wintertime, conventions are fairly well defined, but at this time of year, and even more so later on in June and July, one never can feel certain how the other guests at any given affair are going to dress.

At morning weddings, when one is the guest, she is best dressed when she selects daytime attire daytime length. And the closer she is to the wedding group, the more festive those daytime clothes should be. At most of the smarter weddings that take place before four in the afternoon—no matter how formal the wedding—one sees the guests in suits, "dressmaker" suits as we call them to distinguish them from the tailored morning variety. And even those who attend the reception or the wedding breakfast immediately after, avoid dressing too formally. The mistake most made in dressing for such occasions is to believe that because the occasion is festive and formal, that long dresses are in order. Six, seven, or eight inches from the floor are allowable, but ankle or instep length never. Such should be kept for late afternoons and evenings only.

Formal afternoon and evening clothes are in closer alliance this year than they have ever been, but there is still a distinction. The sleeveless sort of dress, or the one that is practically sleeveless, as so many are, is definitely an "after dark" dress. Even with a hat, it is likely to seem overdressed in the daylight. However, the dinner dress, if it is cut high in the back, and has sleeves or cape or jacket, may be assembled with afternoon accessories and worn to formal afternoon occasions. The difference is not in the length, as it used to be, but in the extent of decolletage. A gown cut low in the back, even though it has voluminous sleeves or shoulder covering, is still incorrect for afternoon. And afternoon clothes always require a hat.

We should advise those of you who are invited to affairs during these coming few months, to learn as much as you can about what was worn to similar affairs last year. Every group, it seems, has its own ideas on the subject of formality. If you can learn very little, the safest rules then are these. For any occasion before four o'clock, wear daytime clothes, daytime length. If the place is at the seashore or on some college campus, spectator sports clothes or light silks will be right. If it is in the city, any sort of suit or ensemble which is not too "sturdy looking" is correct. If the affair is one which will begin in the late afternoon and last through the evening, the two-piece or jacket dress is good. With the jacket and a hat and gloves, it is right for afternoon; without the jacket and a hat it is right for after dinner and through to the wee sma' hours. In case the jacket dress is not to your liking, then the best choice is an afternoon frock, long. Overdressing an afternoon function is considered worse taste than underdressing an evening one.

And if you are still confused about what to wear, the BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SCHOOL OF CLOTHES, you know, is here to help you. Address your letters to Margaret Matson.

FOR WARM WEATHER RIDING

Miss Natica Nast paused for a moment on the veranda of the Casino Terrace at the Greenbriar just after one of her daily rides through the hills at White Sulphur Springs W. Va. She is wearing the sort of outfit which has become the popular choice of smart riders throughout the country. Plain whipcord jodphurs, low riding boots, cotton broadcloth riding shirt with a four-in-hand tie—o sometimes a light jersey polo shirt open at the throat—a well-fitted but casual-looking tweed coat, a plaided wool ascot caught with a tie pin to keep it in place, and a pair of pigskin gloves. Riding breeches with high riding boots are sometimes substituted, though for warm weather riding the jodphurs are cooler.

Good Manners

Speaking of Your Husband

WHEN MRS. ALLEN is talking to a close friend, she speaks of her husband by his first name . . . for example, "Bob thoroughly enjoyed that book."

When she is speaking to a person whom she knows very slightly, or when she is speaking to a stranger, she speaks of her husband as "My husband."

Mrs. Allen does not speak of her husband as "Mr. Allen" except to a tradesperson or to a servant.

Graduation Invitation

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

As graduation time is approaching, I believe many girls are facing the same problem I am. I have been going about with a young man for almost two years and although he doesn't live very far away, I have only been to his home twice in that time. Would it be proper to send his parents an invitation to my graduation exercises, and would it be correct to write "No obligation" on it? If I send an invitation to his parents would it be proper to send him a separate invitation?

To send these parents an invitation to your graduation would be a friendly thing to do and I am sure that these people would not misinterpret your thoughtful gesture. But don't write "No obligation" on this invitation . . . or any other phrase of this kind. This distinctly takes away from the charm of the invitation, and dictates to the receiver a point of view about which you should give them their own choice. If they are, as they probably are, reasonable people, they will take the invitation as an invitation, and not as a bid for gifts. Send the young man a separate invitation

He Wants Her to Go to College

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am seventeen and in love with a college boy of twenty-two. He sees me three nights a week and he has told my parents that he wishes me to have a college education. He has also told me that we could not be married until he made at least $60 a week, which looked as if it would be in four or five years' time. I know he loves me, but don't you think that is too long to wait? I think that a young couple could easily live on $30 a week, but he disagrees with me. ANXIOUS

Dear Anxious: Seventeen is very young to tie one's self up in an engagement, with no prospects of marrying nearer than four or five years, as you seem to think yourself. I should continue friendly with this young man, with no idea of becoming engaged.

Science Gains in War on Cancer

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

AT A RECENT meeting of the American Society for the Control of Cancer held at the New York Academy of Medicine announcement was made of successful studies made in cancer. Though the cause of this disease has not been found, much has been learned that benefits the victim of this dreaded disease.

Dr. Copeland

Dr. James Ewing, one of the directors of cancer research, announced at the meeting that the results obtained from the experimental production of cancer in animals show that the disease may come from many different causes. Certain conditions lead to cancer and produce various forms of the disease. This eminent authority stated that gratifying advancement in the knowledge and treatment of cancer has taken place in the past 25 years.

No one will deny that the outlook for the cancer patient is greatly improved. But there are still too many victims of this disease who suffer untold agony because of ignorance, fear, and hesitancy to accept the treatment offered by modern science. Many suffer from the great dangers of treatment by charlatans and the use of so-called cancer "cures."

It is not uncommon for a patient to tire of going to a physician and quit because he does not think he is improving. Such a person resorts to patent salves and "sure cures" that promise miraculous results.

Many sufferers from cancer turn to unreliable methods of treatment because they fear operation. It is unfortunate that fear of the knife still exists. All the authorities, all the leading specialists in cancer, agree that early recognition of this disease and its prompt and thorough removal by surgery, are at present our most reliable means of combatting this disease. Relief from the spread of the cancer cells is possible, too, by the use of the X-rays, radium and other methods of control.

Maple Recipes Right From Vermont

By MARTHA LEE

NO ONE who has been in Vermont when the sap is running and has tasted the unforgettable flavor of real maple, ever fails to get herself a bottle or a can of this gift from heaven, to flavor desserts, frostings or better than all, while the cool days are grim with us, to pour lavishly onto hot pancakes.

Here are some pet recipes right from the Green Mountain State.

Maple Nut Cakes

2 eggs
1 cup scraped maple sugar
½ tsp. vanilla
½ cup white or fine entire-wheat flour
¼ tsp. baking powder
⅝ cup chopped walnut meats
¼ tsp. salt.

Beat the eggs until light and frothy, add the sugar and vanilla, and continue beating until the mixture is very creamy. Sift together the flour, baking powder and salt and add alternately with the nuts, reserving a few to sprinkle over the tops of the cakes, thus obviating the necessity for frosting. Bake from 15 to 20 minutes in small well-oiled pans in a moderate oven—350-375 deg. F.

Maple Rolls

Prepare recipe for plain baking powder biscuits, turn the mixture onto a board, roll into an oblong piece a third-inch thick and spread lightly to within an inch of the edge with three-fourths cupful of scraped maple sugar, mixed with a third cupful of butter. Roll like a jelly roll suit in crosswise slices one inch thick, and place cut side down in well-oiled pans to bake, using an oven a little cooler than directed, lest the rolls burn

Maple Pudding Sauce

½ cupful maple syrup
Yolks of 2 eggs
2-3 cup whipped cream
1-8 tsp. salt

Scald the maple syrup in a double boiler, pour it over the well-beaten yolks of eggs, add the salt, return to the double-boiler, and cook until thick. Cool, then beat in the whipped cream

Is It Love, Or the Pursuit of Love?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

"Mine is the old story of a girl who held her sweetheart as long as she didn't care, then lost him when she had learned to love him too well."

In different words, from various angles, from different parts of the country, scores of girls have written me the same thing. Helen P. from whose letter I quote, amplified the theme as follows:

"At first I didn't like him, refused to go 'steady,' as they say, but he just beat down my resistance and made me do as he wanted. In looking back over my entire story experience, I feel as if I had been hypnotized, or charmed, as they say of a bird.

"I'm not trying to excuse myself. I had periods of terrible clear-sightedness, when I knew the whole arrangement was wrong, and I would decline to see Jim and write him notes to keep away; then, the first time I'd see him, my resolution would melt.

BECAME ENGAGED

"There came a time when this was reversed; when I wanted to see him, and he didn't want to see me. He became engaged to a friend of mine. I didn't resent this on the girl's part. She didn't know how much I cared.

"One night at a dance, when we were all together, she happened to be talking to me, and Jim dragged her away as if my being there with her was something contagious!

"I've learned my lesson, Miss Fairfax, and it has been a bitter one. I'm not going to do anything foolish or desperate. I'm going to face the situation with a smile, even when I meet Jim and his wife. And when I come across the right man and decide to marry him, I'm going to tell him about Jim.

"But why are men like that? Is it the pursuit that really interests them, so that when the girl loves them she becomes like any other nut-brown possession? What, with your large experience of life, do you think of a case like mine?

—HELEN P."

TAKING IT SENSIBLY

Thank goodness, you're taking this disillusioning experience so sensibly. Please don't take Jim back, when he comes crawling and says it was all a mistake that he loved you all the time and the girl he married doesn't understand him.

The "Jims" of this world are in a class by themselves. As you say, it's the pursuit that thrills them more than any girl. Not all men far from it—belong to this class.

It would be like rubbing salt in a wound to say you'd made a lucky escape; but, indeed, my dear, you have.

Mistaken Loyalty to a Friend

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am terribly in love with a boy, but he imagines that I am in love with his friend. Before our crowd in high school he said I was his best girl. Does that show he cares for me? Being young is his friend keeps him from inviting me to go out with him. How can I show him that I really care about him.

MEGGIF

Dear Meggie: Boys and girls often "fly off on these lovely tangents," as one of my correspondents called them. The principle is fine when it's not founded on a mistake. Better get the ropes untangled. As you're all in high school, perhaps you've read in your English class Longfellow's "Courtship of Miles Standish." You'll remember that John Alden was doing the courting for his friend, and Priscilla, the girl in question, said: "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?" You might lend the boy this book.

THE DAILY TRUE STORY

The Wedding Ring

"AN OLD SCHOOL CHUM," remarked the girl who was introducing Muriel Saunders to the mixed members of the club. "Just picked her up on the street. Haven't seen her since we played hookey together in high school. But she is a card."

Robert Bradshaw gave the newcomer a leaky once-over. She was petite, cuddlesome with soft, fluffy hair, shining eyes and an expansive smile.

"How could you forget her?" he remarked gallantly.

"I had to," remarked the girl who had brought her. "She was too popular. Couldn't keep a boy friend on account of her."

"Just a natural born flirt, eh?" queried Robert.

"Oh, no, no," interposed Muriel. "Don't paint me as black as all that. I'm a perfectly good, moral stay-at-home girl."

"Well, we'll have to take you at your word," bantered Robert. Someone turned the radio on and a wave of "hot" music burst over the room. Robert took her hand.

Muriel danced lightly and gracefully. The orchestra, a few moments later, played "Home, Sweet Home." Muriel looked into Robert's eyes. There was a pressure of palms. Robert felt the impingement had been smitten.

WEDDING RING

The music trailed off softly. Robert led Muriel back to her seat. He was still holding her left hand in his palm. As she sat down he bent gallantly forward and she moved her hand gracefully aside looked at her fingers. She was wearing a wedding ring.

The evening wore on. Robert noted others dancing with her. Muriel seemed to be in an unusually good mood. She was complacently animated. Robert thought of that ring on her finger. He lived on happy anticipation, though at times he was unable to tie it to his duties and no longer he invited her for another dance.

"That's perfect," she remarked flirtatiously, "my first and my last dance tonight—with you."

"Why the last?" he asked.

"Because little Muriel has to be a good girl and get home early," she laughed.

"To the family?" he asked. He was tempted to say "Husband" instead of family, but he did not have the courage of his thinking.

"Yes," she answered with a smile.

The music ended and he bade her good-bye. For a while he meditated offering to take her home and then thought the better of it.

MOCKERY OF PHRASE.

Her words persisted in the morning after she was gone. "Don't be a fool," he tried to advise himself, "to fall for a married woman." Then he remembered her phrase at the beginning of the evening, "a good moral stay-at-home girl" and he wondered at the mockery of the phrase. It had sounded so artless and so innocent at that time.

He began to pry the girl who had brought Muriz to the club with questions. How long had she known her, what kind of a girl was she, was she always so flirtatious did she have lots of boy friends was she known as a "petter" and other similar remarks. He asked these questions incidentally, banter-ing, and thought she was hiding his interest in Muriel behind a veil of good humor. Little by little he gained

"What's on your mind, Robert," asked the girl, "or rather, what's on your heart? You might as well come out and tell me what's eating you."

WEARING RING

"Well," drawled Robert, "tell me this—is she married?"

"If she is—she hasn't told me," replied the girl. "What makes you ask the question?"

"Haven't you noticed"—Robert looked her straight in the eyes—"haven't you noticed the wedding ring she was wearing?"

The girl burst into a peal of laughter. Then she was sadder in the next moment.

"Gosh, what fools these men be," she remarked, "and how suspicious that wedding ring! Why Muriel has been wearing it since the age of 12."

"What do you mean," queried Robert, "what for?"

"It's her mother's," replied the girl, "and it was her mother's dying wish to wear it in her memory—gosh, what a stupid suspicion."

Robert rose and seized the girl by her. "Listen," he remarked, "name your own gift—I'm the happiest man alive."

G. O. P. LEADERS SPLIT OVER TAX LEVY

The split in Republican ranks over the plan of Gov Ely to raise $25,000,000 in new taxes, revealed yesterday in a letter of Rep. Henry L. Shattuck in support of the program, was widened still further today as a result of the endorsement of Speaker Leverett Saltonstall.

Speaking before the Boston Credit Bureau at the Ritz Carlton Hotel last night Speaker Saltonstall declared definitely that the Ely program was the only real solution of the problem at present. Two other solutions, he said, were to lay the burden on real estate and to use the credit of the Commonwealth and pass the burden on to the future.

He declared that regardless of the amount of money which might be allotted to Massachusetts cities and towns in the event the LaFollette-Costigan measure was passed a total of $25,000,000 would have to be raised in the state to aid real estate.

In his speech Speaker Saltonstall definitely aligned himself on the side of Governor Ely, Sen. Henry Parkman, Tax Commr. Long and others who are leading the fight to push the new tax program through the Legislature and served to widen the split which has developed in Republican ranks over the matter.

He said he stated frankly that Massachusetts should get whatever sum is allotted to the state under the LaFollette-Costigan measure, but that this would certainly not do away with the need for enactment of the new bill.

Regarding his other two proposals for meeting the emergency, he declared that he believed it impossible to leave the tax burden on real estate. Concerning borrowing and the paying off of the loan by future generations, the Speaker pointed out that the State's credit was good at present and should not be abused at this time.

INCREASE FOR NAVY YARD

Washington, May 4 (AP)—Mayor James M. Curley, of Boston, declared here that he had received from President Roosevelt assurance that activity at the Boston Navy Yard would be not only maintained but probably increased.

Curley discussed the navy yard situation hurriedly with the chief executive after appearing at the White House as spokesman for the United Conference of Mayors.

"I told the President," Curley said, "I hoped he would do something not only to keep the yard open but to keep it busy. The President told me he was going to do both and planned to have more work done to the Boston yard."

Meanwhile, Samuel Silverman corporation counsel for the city of Boston, arranged with the Interstate Commerce Commission for arguments on May 22 on the interstage action brought by New Jersey and the Port of Boston against the Port of New York.

Beauty Tests Fat Theory by Daily Diet of 3.2 Beer

Washington, May 4 (INS)—Does drinking beer make one fat? Government scientists say no; tradition says yes.

Miss Charlotte Mayo, beautiful 18-year-old society girl here, will start drinking beer—eight glasses of 3.2 every day for three weeks in a practical test conducted by the Washington Herald.

Today Miss Mayo will fly to New York for a five-day visit. There she will drink the beverage in swanky hotels, reporting each day its effect.

She has been given a thorough physical examination by prominent physicians. Three weeks from now she again will be examined.

The examination showed Miss Mayo weighs 123½ pounds and is 5 feet 4 inches tall. She is one-half pound over the standard of her height and weight. Her blood pressure is 102—62, which is normal.

Having almost the proportions of Venus de Milo, her hips measure 37½ inches, bust 37, waist 27, thigh 18½, calf 12½ and ankles 7¾ inches.

BRITAIN SHY OF BI-METALLISM

London, May 4—President Roosevelt's administration in Washington has suggested a bi-metallic basis for all the world's currencies, it is revealed definitely, by a Whitehall spokesman, following the return of Prime Minister MacDonald from the United States.

Great Britain is inclined to view the proposal with apprehension, it was stated.

Britain is not to be hurried into going back on the gold standard until her conditions are met, the spokesman declared, nor does Britain see eye to eye with Washington on a gold-and-silver standard.

Cincinnati, O., May 4 (AP)—W. A. Julian, a Kentucky farm boy who became a wealthy manufacturer of shoes, accepted appointment as treasurer of the United States.

Julian, still carefully dodging mention of his age, though friends put it at 68 or thereabouts, announced his plans just before entering a luncheon meeting of the associated charities which he leads in co-ordinating the charities of the Cincinnati area.

TUFTS STUDENTS ROUT CAMPUS INVADERS

WHO COULD ABANDON YOU?

Nurse Anna M. Loftus of St. Mary's Infant Asylum in Dorchester cannot understand how any parent could have abandoned such a fine baby girl as this four-month-old miss. She was left in a North End doorway last night. (Boston American photo.)

STONE OUSTER NOW SEEN AS CERTAIN

House Committee Votes 10 to 5 to Report Ouster Move

Majority and minority reports on the action of the legislative committee on the judiciary in favorably reporting the petition to remove Judge Arthur P. Stone from the bench will be filed in the Legislature within the next 10 days.

The reports will cite the grounds on which both sides based their action in regard to the petition of Rep. William C. Dolan of Jamaica Plain. The committee voted 10 to 5 to report the petition favorably into the Legislature.

Informed of the action Judge Stone declined to make any comment at the present time saying that the matter was still in the hands of the committee and the Legislature. He expressed a desire to know the names of those dissenting.

The petition, requesting Governor Ely to remove Judge Stone from the East Cambridge District Court bench, charges that Judge Stone "while acting as fiduciary officer appointed by the Probate Court misappropriated certain funds entrusted to his care as such officer."

The funds in question were those of Dr. Inez L. Clarke of Cambridge and her late sister, Dr. Genevieve Clark, also of that city.

Members of the committee who voted for a favorable report on the petition were Rep. Horace T. Cahill of Braintree, House chairman; Senators Charles G. Warren of Arlington, and Frank Hurley of Holyoke, and Reps. Martin Hays of Brighton, Charles J. Innes of Boston, Joseph A. Logan of Hyde Park, Philip H. Stacy of Haverhill, Julius H. Soble of Mattapan, Thomas J. Lane of Lawrence, and Maynard E. S. Clemmons of Wakefield.

MEDFORD GANG BEATEN IN STRUGGLE

Insults to Co-eds Lead to Battle on Campus

Metropolitan police of the Fellsway station will be on duty at the old state reservoir just off the Tufts College campus tonight to prevent any repetition of the town and gown struggle, which threw the campus into wild disorder for several minutes last night.

The melee, according to students was started by a band of 50 Medford youths who invaded the campus to avenge the forcible ejection of four of their number by students Tuesday night after they had allegedly insulted co-eds from Jackson College.

"TOWNIES" RETREAT

It was only a matter of minutes before the sons of Tufts learned of the invasion and plunged joyously into the fray. The contest was fairly equal for a time but student reinforcements kept arriving and after a time the invading "townies were outnumbered two to one.

They were finally forced to beat a hasty retreat, supporting several of their number who were rather the worse for wear. The victorious students pursued them along College ave. onto Boston ave. for some distance.

Telephone calls to the Fellsway station sent a detail of Metropolitan police to the scene on the jump but by the time they arrived all they could do was ask a few questions.

From questioning the students police learned that four of the invaders had visited the campus Tuesday night and insulted co-eds and their escorts around the reservoir.

GUARD ON DUTY TONIGHT

Nothing more was thought of the matter until last night when the outsiders suddenly appeared in force.

Then followed the pitched battle which resulted in victory for the students. Police decided that the fight was out of their jurisdiction but that they would patrol the reservoir tonight to prevent any recurrence of the disturbance.

MUSICIAN HOME, PINES FOR BERLIN BEER

Fabien Sevitzky, nephew of Serge Koussevitzky, the Symphony Orchestra conductor, has returned to Boston from a tour of Europe as a guest conductor. He said 3.2 beer tasted weak after drinking the more potent German brews. Among the orchestras he conducted abroad was the famous Berlin Philharmonic. (Boston American Photo.)

GIRL DAZED BY $5645 HOLDUP

Testimony of government witnesses will be continued today before Judge Boudreau and jury in Suffolk superior court in the trial of six men for the armed robbery of a $5645 payroll of a Chelsea shoe company last February 18.

The defendants are Karl "Tuk" Wilson, former boxer; William Gillar, Anthony Della Russo, Charles Russo, James Downey and Armando DeAngelis. All are charged with armed robbery and Wilson and Gillar are charged also with carrying revolvers without authority.

Miss Esther Freedman of Lynn, bookkeeper for the shoe company, a government witness, testified her mind was a "complete blank" regarding the incidents of the holdup.

She said she and two other young women were seated in the office when the bandits entered.

Patrolman James McChristal, retired Revere police officer, testified regarding the capture of five of the defendants a few hours after the holdup.

BABY ON STEP FINDS HOME

The four-months-old girl, found abandoned in a doorway in Cooper st., opposite St. Mary's Church, North End, has a new home today at St. Mary's Infant Asylum, Cushing ave., Dorchester.

The child was apparently abandoned shortly before 8 p. m. Her cries attracted the attention of passersby, who carried her to St. Mary's rectory.

She was immediately sent to the infant asylum. A note pinned to her dress requested care for her.

Installment Plan Urged

Medford's unpaid taxes for 1932 total $1,100,000. Mayor John H. Burke says, and urges taxpayers to start paying their taxes, and 1933 taxes as well, under the new installment plan, which the city has adopted.

DOLE FIGHT ON BOOTLEGS NEAR

Chairman Simon Hecht of the Overseers of Public Welfare was characterized as "irresponsible and without ability," by City Councillor Clement A. Norton today when he challenged Hecht to a debate and promised to "prove that the welfare department is the most corrupt and incompetent department in the city."

The challenge grew out of a controversy that flamed Monday when Norton made the statement that three-fourths of the bootleggers in his district, Hyde Park, were on the welfare rolls, and that there were 800 bootleggers in the district.

3.2 Beer Is Weak After Tasting Berlin Brew, Says Sevitzy

The only way a beer drinker used to the robust brews of Germany could get a kick out of the new 3.2 beer would be to drink it while standing next to a surly Missouri mule.

That is the opinion of Fabien Sevitzky, nephew of Serge Koussevitzky, Symphony conductor, Sevitzky returned home today after a seven weeks' tour of Europe as guest conductor.

"The fact that America got beer back," said Sevitzky, "was page one headline news all over Europe. The first thing I did on reaching New York yesterday was to order a bottle of 3.2 in a Broadway restaurant.

"'Is this beer?' I asked the waiter. He assured me that it was. If he hadn't told me, I would have thought it water."

Sevitzky spent 13 days in Berlin, where he led the famous Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra.

"During all my stay I witnessed some of the alleged atrocities committed by the Nazis against Jews," Sevitzky said. "I first learned of the persecutions when I reached Paris, where the papers featured the news. Hitler's rise to power seems to have intensified French feeling against Germany."

Sevitzky said the happiest experience of his trip was his phone conversation with his father, mother and two brothers, who are living in Moscow. He did not have an opportunity to visit them, but phoned them from Warsaw. It was the first time in 11 years he had spoken to them.

BOYS ASK AID IN LOCATING DAD

"Bobby" Caron, 13, and his brother, Paul, 7, of 11 Cleveland ave., Everett, have not seen their daddy for two years and so today they came to the Boston Evening American to ask aid in locating him.

Their daddy, Paul Caron, 33 an insurance broker, left home one day in June bound for work. He has not been heard from or seen since.

He is described as being five feet, ten inches tall, weighing 180 pounds, with olive skin and a scar over his right eye.

Golfing Priest in Plea for Caddies

The caddie strike at the Salem Country Club appeared to be wiping 48 hours of settlement today as a result of the arbitration activities of the Rev. W. George Mullen, pastor of St. John's Church, Peabody, and a golf enthusiast.

It was learned the priest asked the boys to nominate a representative committee to treat with club officials and Daniel Measures, grounds superintendent, in an effort to effect a compromise.

Woburn Pays Off After Seven Weeks

Seven payless weeks ended today in Woburn when all city employes were paid to date. Old-age assistance, mothers' aid and soldiers' relief and $30,000 in accumulated city bills also were squared up.

The $150,000 to do this was obtained by advance payment of taxes and sale of tax notes over the counter.

Ryan Guest at Somerville Dinner

Rep. Francis E. Ryan, first resident of the Magoun sq. section of Somerville, to be elected to the Legislature, will be the guest of honor at the annual banquet of the Magoun Square Old Timers this evening, in Somerville High school gymnasium.

One of the features of the evening will be the appearance of Jake Kilrain, former heavyweight fighter and resident of the Magoun Square section.

Clink of Beer Glasses Merry Music at Opening of Pops

With the clinking of the beer glasses providing an undertone to the sound of the violins for the first time in 13 years, the pops opened their 48th season in Symphony Hall last night.

Long before Conductor Arthur Fiedler stepped out on the stage, Symphony Hall was crowded and the waitresses were busy pushing brew. The S. R. O. sign had been out for several days and from all indications, whatever the effect of 3.2 on employment and business, it means a new lease of life for Boston's most famous concerts.

People came from all ranks and walks of life. The debutante and the college man were there with the matron and the executive. Many turned out who had not been to a pop concert since the noble experiment got under way.

Dinner jackets and low backed evening dresses were side by side with less festive attire. The one thing the audience had in common was the beer and the smiles on their faces. There was beer of every kind including a special shipment from Milwaukee sent on for the opening night. Some of the first brew from abroad was on sale.

The crowd cheered and demanded an encore when the orchestra played a song composed by Secretary of the Treasury Woodin in honor of Franklin D. Roosevelt. And when they broke into the famous old stein song, they rose on their chairs, grasped glasses and sang.

"For its always fair weather when good fellows get together."

"I never heard them sing like that in all the years I've been coming," said one society matron as she left the hall.

Auto Thief Escapes 4 Police Forces

Following a five-mile chase, which started on Massachusetts ave., near Brattle st., Arlington, at 2 o'clock this morning, in which the police of four towns participated, firing a dozen shots, a stolen car was abandoned in Billerica, the driver escaping through a vacant field.

The machine was reported stolen to the Brattle sq. police division in Cambridge. Patrolman Gerald Dugan, of Arlington, saw the car on Massachusetts ave. and attempted to stop it, but to no avail. Lexington police were notified by radio. They also failed to stop the car.

Chief Fred Sullivan, of Bedford, fired several shots at the machine when the car sped through that town. In Billerica, Patrolman John Trainor chased the car in a prowl car, firing several shots, but the driver managed to get out of the car and escape.

RIDGLEY LAUDS COAST GUARDS

A spirited defense of the Coast Guard service was made by Capt. Randolph Ridgley, Jr., superintendent of the United States Coast Guard Academy, at New London, speaking before the Merchant Marine Club of Boston, at the Chamber of Commerce, last night. He declared that this service is the most unpopular in its government, because of public misunderstanding.

Citing the value of the service to ship owners, Capt. Ridgley pointed out that in the last 10 years the Coast Guard had saved from destruction vessels and cargoes worth $416,000,000 and in the same period assisted 1000 persons on board stricken vessels with the expense being carried entirely by Uncle Sam.

"In the 13 years that we have had the duty of enforcing the law against liquor smuggling," he said, "only 28 persons have been killed in resisting arrest, while 12 of our personnel gave their lives in the execution of their duties."

Fast as Lightning Is Billy Bonthron Princeton Runner

Berger and Knothe Pasting the Agate More About Collins

By JACK CONWAY

Billy Bonthron of Princeton will try to make you forget all about the old-time runners when he displays his amazing speed and endurance in the track meet with Harvard at the Stadium on Saturday afternoon. He has entered the 800, 1500 and 3000-meter events. He will probably start in each.

It is not anything unusual for Bonthron to win three races at important meets. While wearing the colors of Princeton against Yale last year, Bonthron won the half-mile and mile and finished second in the two-mile. Billy pulled up so that a teammate could win the two-mile race.

At the Penn Carnival, Bonthron ran as anchor for Princeton and did the half-mile in a fraction over 1m. 58s. This young man is the nearest thing to a lightning bolt I know of. At Mr. Boston the B. A. A. games in the Garden last winter he was barely beaten out by the spectacular Glenn Dawson of Kansas in the 1000-yard run. There was considerable dispute following the race as to who was the winner.

When Princeton's track team enters the Stadium Saturday, it will be the first time since 1926 that the Tigers have clashed with the Crimson on the track in this section of the country. Last spring Princeton won from Harvard at Princeton following the resumption of track relationships. The Princeton track team broke with Harvard when it was charged that Tiger football teams were a bit rough in their tussles with John Harvard.

If you wish to see one of the fastest humans in action, I advise you to drop in at the Stadium on Saturday afternoon.

Wally Berger Has Found the Batting Range

The recent winning surge of the Braves has been greatly helped by the terrific hitting of Wally Berger and Fritz Knothe. Home runs by Knothe and Schulmerich gave the Tribe the punch it needed to win the second game of its series from the Reds after the latter had secured what appeared to be a commanding lead. Knothe has also proved he does not intend to let the third base job go to Gyselman.

Baseball men will tell you that a winning club must have long distance hitters. Smashing doubles, triples and home runs furnish the fire that win pennants. The old White Sox under Fielder Jones was one of the few ball clubs to win championships without first class hitters. They called Jones' teams the "Hitless Wonders." They used to win most of their games by such scores as 1 to 0, 2 to 1 and 3 to 2. The White Sox of those days had as pitchers Big Ed Walsh, Doc White and Nick Altrock. No club could score many runs against any member of this trio.

With the lively ball and poorer pitching, long distance hitting has increased. Braves and Red Sox this year have their share of long distance clouters who will bang out the necessary hits to pull many a game out of the fire.

Jimmy Collins Would Never Hit at First Ball Pitched

Since my reference to Jimmy Collins and his deeds as third baseman for the old Boston Nationals, I have received several queries in regard to the old-time third basemen. Many fans did not know that Collins, who later became manager of the Red Sox, had once been a National Leaguer.

Bill Bradley, who played for Cleveland in the days of Lajoie, is the only third baseman who measured up to Collins in all round ability. Collins was a heady ball player, a fine fielder and a dangerous hitter. He never tried to hit the first ball pitched. Perhaps he did this to show his contempt of the pitcher.

Rabbit Maranville of the Braves is another player who seldom takes a poke at the first ball. I believe this is a result of his training under the late George Stallings. The latter believed in making a pitcher work. Stallings and Johnny Evers used to insist that the Rabbit take two strikes before he tried to hit. They felt that on account of his small stature he had an excellent chance to get a base on balls. When a pitcher is trying to get the agate over the plate for the Rabbit, he is liable to groove one. In such cases, Maranville may be relied upon to take a healthy smash at the ball.

Maranville has been playing his usual brilliant game in the field. He never permits the ball to play him. He always moves in on the ball. This saves time and always decreases the possibility of an error. I expect the Rabbit will be playing ball when most of us are trying to keep from stepping on our whiskers.

Random Shots at the Target

Just to be first I wish to state Jack Dempsey will don the padded mittens and work out with both Max Schmeling and Max Baer the latter part of this month as part of the buildup for the big scrap on June 8 . . . Joe Jacobs is my authority . . . Incidentally Joe told me I was right when I wrote Sharkey made Schmeling fight his fight last June . . . Max should have taken more chances . . . Schmeling has a great deal of natural ability . . . If he had not gone to the top so quickly he would be a better fighter today as he would have been in there tossing leather four or five times a year . . . Doc Morris, in charge of the publicity for the Max Baer training camp at Atlantic City, has asked me to drop down to take a dip in the sad sea waves and also to see the Californian do his stuff . . . The Ritz-Carlton Hotel has been picked for the press headquarters at Atlantic City . . . Strangler Lewis sends word he will come to Boston early to finish his training for his finish bout, best two falls out of three, with Ed Don George which will be held at the Garden on May 17, under the direction of Paul Bowser . . . Meanwhile Bowser is trying to secure a first-class opponent for Gus Sonnenberg, who appears in another bout on the same card . . . Sunny Jim Bottomley looked right at home back on first base for the Reds . . . And smashed out a single just to prove he can still do things with the old bludgeon.

Upsala Nine Tackles B. U. at Weston

A Boston University nine that has only won one game in four will entertain Upsala College at the William E. Nickerson recreation field, Weston, this afternoon.

The Terriers' record is not impressive but Coach John Harmon still feels that he has a good ball club.

Just who will pitch for B. U. is not known. Ray Campion pitched yesterday and Harry Corson is slated to work against Brown Saturday. This leaves today's choice up to either Joe Gordon, Jim Connors or Johnny Petrosky.

Jim Connors may get the call as the Somerville boy has looked impressive in practice games.

Derby Special From Boston Fizzles

New England folk are great lovers of horse racing—but to travel to Louisville, Ky., for the Derby—well that's something else again or maybe its because "no funds."

When Dempsey, Derb Speaks, off for the Rose Grad state there was only three Derb bound passengers aboard, according to an official of the Boston and Albany railroad. Two more were to be taken aboard at Springfield and two more at Pittsfield—both women.

Les Patrick Boys Star as Team Wins

Victoria, B. C., May 4 (AP)—The Victoria Blue Ribbons, basketball champions of Western Canada, today needed only one more victory to take the Dominion title.

The Blue Ribbons, led by the Patrick boys, Lynn and Muzz turned back the invaders 35-25 in an exciting overtime game last night to take the lead in games two to one. The title has been held in the West since 1923.

Crimson '36 Nine Visits St. Mark's

The Harvard freshman baseball nine will play St. Marks at Southboro this afternoon. The game was twice cancelled earlier in the season due to poor weather. The Crimson yearlings played a hard game with Tufts yesterday as it could be at top form for the contest with the prep schoolers this afternoon.

WABAN YOUTH IN OUTBOARD RACE

New York, May 4 (AP)—Clinton Ferguson, a 15-year-old high school boy from Waban, Mass., has a chance to win 10 of the 40 prizes offered in the annual Albany-New York outboard marathon, May 14.

Weighing only 100 pounds, he can cop the prizes for the youngest and the lightest driver to finish. If he can bring his "Class A" craft home in front in the handicap race, he can collect two grand prizes, two more for being the first amateur driver to finish and two for leading in Class A. Other prizes open to him are those for the first finisher who never won a race before and the first who never finished in the Albany-New York event previously.

In addition to the 10 prizes there is a medal which the Middle Atlantic Outboard Association, sponsor of the race, gives to every driver who finishes the grind.

Brooklyn Fans Plan Big Time for Wagner

Brooklyn, May 4 (AP)—It's Honus Wagner day in Brooklyn today as the Pittsburgh Pirates come here to open their first series of the season against the Dodgers when he concludes his studies at now a Pirate coach has been honored in one way or another in nearly every National League city he has visited so far but Brooklyn intends to outdo the rest.

17 Likely to Run in Derby Field

By WARREN BROWN

Louisville, Ky., May 4 (US)—Ladysman, the No. 1 horse of the Kentucky Derby, if you care for future book ratings, is at the Downs. So are four more Easterners, two of them Ladysman's stablemates, Pomponius and Pompoleon, which gives the Coe forces three Derby prospects on the ground.

Along with the consignment of Coe's came Trace Call of the Audley Farm, and Dark Winter, which belongs to W. S. Kilmer, the hose. Dark Winter does. But the rest of the dark winter has been shared by everyone.

LIKELY TO START

These five arrivals, plus the six that moved in from Maryland earlier in the week, gives the East 11 possible starters, though it is unlikely that the Coe entry will include more than one besides Ladysman.

If, as the railbirds believe, the starting field for the Derby Saturday will not exceed 17, that means that the West will have to depend on quality, rather than quantity.

The quality, of course, is bound up in Head Play, which ran such a smashing race in the preparation, and in Charley O., which the Tayloy boys think now, more than ever, is the Derby winner.

Col. E. R. Bradley whose Derby doings are always of absorbing interest, seems reconciled to the fact that Broker's Tip is the only candidate on which he can place much dependence, and if the colonel hasn't been chattering just for the sake of stirring things up, he doesn't place much faith in Broker's Tip to win the Derby.

LADYSMAN SELECTED

That distinction he is quoted as having given to Ladysman, going so far as to offer to bet Ladysman against anything else in the race.

However, the colonel's offer hasn't disturbed the serenity of the rest of the old Kentuckians. They're still sold, for the most part, on Head Play and Charley O. They had a bit of scare when a report of an injury to Head Play spread around. Investigation established that the report was greatly exaggerated.

Hildebrand's 3098th Game Sets New Umpire Record

St. Louis, May 4 (AP)—Meet Mr. George Hildebrand, American League umpire, who admits working 3098 consecutive games in his more than 20 years as a ball and strike dictator in the circuit.

"In 20 years I've never missed a single inning of a single game," quoth Mr. Hildebrand. "I've never missed a train. Every game I was assigned to, I went through with."

With these words "Hildy" disposed of the touted record of Cy Pfirman, a brother big league arbitrator Tuesday. Pfirman became ill before the Giant-Cub battle in New York, to which he was assigned, and was unable to appear.

This broke his record of 1710 consecutive games and great was the wonder of it all.

The 3098-game record of Hildebrand does not include numerous spring and exhibition games of his frequent appearances during World Series week. He hopes to add several years to his total.

BROACA FEARED TOO MUCH WORK

New Haven, Ct., May 4 (INS)—Johnny Broaca, bespectacled pitching ace of the Yale baseball team, who was severed from the squad yesterday by Coach Joe Wood, was back with an answer today. The player made no secret of his discomfiture over the coach's action. He likes to play baseball, he said.

Wood, Broaca declared today, expected him to work too often on the mound.

"At the beginning of the season," he said, "I told Mr. Wood I was physically unable to pitch more than one full game a week. That was the reason for refusing to pitch against Albie Booth's team."

Broaca last pitched on Friday, when he won a 2 to 1 game against Columbia.

There were widespread reports that the Eli hurler is slated for a tryout in major league baseball when he concludes his studies at Yale. He is a junior now and hails from Lawrence, Mass.

Pitching is work, Broaca explained, and because he is a fast ball pitcher he "bears down" on every ball. His friends intimated he feared he might burn himself out in college and be useless for a major league career upon graduation.

Coach Wood declined to comment.

Cue Tilt Does a Hesperus as Rain and Writs Descend

New York, May 4—Storm clouds both of rain and eviction notices, hung over the Elks Club in Brooklyn last night, vieing to get in on the world's amateur 18.2 balkline billiard championship being conducted there.

Flood waters swirled in the streets outside, and a tide of process servers mounted steadily up the steps to the hall in which four masters were drawing beads on the cocking ivories.

Lightning flashed, thunder crashed and an eviction notice was slipped on the tournament, all before you could say "Where's my umbrella?" Then it was out in the street for all hands.

Then N. B. A. officials came to the rescue, found another hall for resumption of play. In the excitement Ted Moons of Belgium established a high-run record of 103.

Girl Rider Applies for Jockey License

Chicago, May 4 (AP)—The stewards at Exposition Park today had under consideration a petition for a jockey's license from Lillian Jenkinson, 24-year-old daughter of J. W. Jenkinson of Monroe, Neb., owner of a stable racing at the track.

Miss Jenkinson has attained some note as a rider at state fair tracks and as an exercise rider. Chief Steward John T. Ireland said the petition would be given every consideration, but he did not think a license would be granted.

Maranville Tells of Daughter's Wish. Derringer May Go To Giants Soon.

—By BILL CORUM—

New York, May 4 (U8)—Because the Messrs. Branch Rickey and Jim Tierney conferred so long in the lobby of the Alamac Hotel on what might have been an important baseball deal for the New York Giants this will have to be a hurry up piece for the paper.

Please excuse it. And if it turns out that you don't like it, don't fail to drop in again tomorrow. You never can tell you know.

But first let me tell you the one about Rabbit Maranville and his daughter. The Rabbit, as of course you know, is the 42-year-old "rookie" infielder of the Braves. He broke into baseball about the time Father Chadwick was first beginning to think about putting a leather covering on the old sacrapple, and has been around ever since.

RABBIT'S LEGS GREAT

Maranville was telling me in Florida this spring that the props seemed to feel about the same as always, and that so long as they felt that way he could keep right on playing major league ball. Which brings us to our story.

Maranville, who makes his home in Rochester in the wintertime, has an 18-year-old daughter. Last fall when he got home from the baseball wars she walked in one evening with a personable young man and said "Pop, this is the boy friend."

Well, the Rabbit scurried around and got out the best there was in the house and finally invited the young man to stay for dinner, which he did.

And it was during the meal that the daughter startled him a little by saying: "Pop, I hope you stay in the big league until I get married and have a baby, so I can bring him out to the game some afternoon and you can be him, 'that's your grandpop p'aying son-and-bow."

A laudable and sensible ambition for the daughter, simple one, the way the Rabbit has been going this spring, that may well be realized.

GIANTS NEED PITCHER

As this bureau warned you a long time back when there still was much talk of the winning run with Dazzy Vance, that deal seems to be cold.

The Indians, who first still promising however than the St. Louis team has more first class pitchers than it knows what to do with, and that the Senators have pitchers none to less than one more qualified than, in such a situation there are always possibilities, which is why I wanted the better part of an evening putting the old Sherlock Holmes on Bernich and James Nothing came of it right then but don't be surprised if the Cards send a pitcher here.

There is little chance that it will be Vance, but it might be, let us say, Carl Hubbell.

Gabby Street is high on both Mooney and Walker, the pitcher secured from the Cubs, but he

DIS DAT TAKES HANDICAP WIN

San Bruno, Cal., May 4 (AP)—Dis Dat galloped home to win the Walnut Creek Handicap, feature race at Tanforan Track. Prince Pest was second and Boardwalker third.

Clyde Turk held Dis Da back in the early stages over the club house course, 350 feet less than a mile, but took the lead easily in the stretch. Time was 1:35 1-5.

Dis Dat was the shortest priced favorite on the meeting to date, paying $2.80, $2.60, and $2.40. Prince Pest paid $4.40 and $2.80 and Broad, walker, $2.80.

The Elks are organizing a four-ball league among the Greater Boston chapters.

Miss Mary Parkinson, Dedham, who plays with the Southern District, has not met with any real competition in two team matches. Miss Parkinson disposed of Miss Francis Stebbins and Miss Grace English both matches ending on 14th greens.

Mrs. Henri F. Prunaret, Jr., is due to break through with a W. G. A. victory today. Mrs. Prunaret is at Thorny Lea with Eastern and as she is well fed up on setbacks will be a dangerous opponent for any Southern District player.

Frank McEachern, manager of the Rockport Country Club, reports that the Cape Ann course is in fine condition and that the summer regular greens are ready for play. Many golfers have been playing Rockport all winter and Pennover a great booster for his lay out predicts a successful season.

Teddy Gow, the Little Scotch maestro, will be back as professional at Rockport this summer.

BRAVES, MINUS 3 STARS, SHOW FLAG CLASS

By JOE CASHMAN

Celebrating the opening of the fourth week of the campaign with a thrilling win over the Reds, the battling Braves boosted themselves into a tie for third place with a record of eight victories and four defeats.

Considering the numerous handicaps they have been laboring under ever since the race started, the Warriors may well be proud of this showing. And nobody could blame them if they went a step further and looked upon their record to date as a sure sign that they'll be in the pennant hunt all the way this season.

Certainly the club is far below its top form with Tom Zachary, Bob Brown and Red Worthington on the shelf. If it can come up to the money without this trio, it doesn't figure to do any worse when the cripples return.

Concerning the condition reports on Zachary and Brown are quite optimistic, while the Worthington chart is rather gloomy. The Alhambra Assassin, the Tribe's most dangerous sticker, has some ligaments or muscles out of place just above the knee of his left leg, resulting probably from favoring his other leg, which he broke last season. A complete rest is the only cure for "Reds" ailment, say docs.

ZACHARY TO START SOON

Ol' Tom Zachary will be ready to make his season's debut any one of these days. The veteran southpaw's faithful left wing has entirely disappeared. All that is holding him back now is a blister on his thumb which should disappear. The next, by Sunday, when "Zach" will celebrate his 36th birthday.

Bobby Brown shouldn't be far behind Zachary in starting. The Hull Howitzer has reached the point where he can throw in batting practice without feeling the kink in his shoulder, which he contracted at St. Petersburg, and the whip gets a mite stronger. Bobby will be ready to go.

The way the Tribesmen have carried on with these three important cogs missing from the machine has been admirable. Never for a moment have they become discouraged. They lost their first three games and turned around and won three. Then they lost four straight and came right back to win that many in a row.

They never give up the chase until it is over, as Pilot Donie Bush of Reds can tell you. He found it out in the second game of the current series at the Wigwam.

BRAVES STAGE BIG RALLY

When the visitors overcame a two-run lead and sent their ace, Red Lucas, into the eighth inning with a two-run lead, Donie had his second straight setback over the Tribesmen all counted and tucked away, but before the stanza was over the native leading, 6 to 6, and eventually won by that count.

Lucas undefeated in three starts before facing the Warriors, was never before subjected to such a hammering in his town as in that eighth chapter of the mid-week fray.

With one gone, Moore singled and Berger followed with a triple. The rally appeared over when Hogan popped to short, but Fritz Knothe turned hero by pleading a home run into the left field stands, and Wes Schulmerich pasted the very next Lucas pitch to almost the same spot for another four-bagger.

Ben Cantwell, given a two-run lead in the first six innings, was found for two earned runs in the seventh, when Knothe fumbled a roller, and then was belted for four hits and two more runs in the eighth.

So he hung up another victory spending the ninth inning in the bench watching Walter Betts set the hostiles down in order and listening to Ed Brandt muttering something about justice, which didn't sound exactly complimentary.

In the final and rubber game of the engagement this p. m., Fred Frankhouse will match his famous curve against the speed of St Johnson, whom the Cincinnati scribes love to refer to as the $100,000 pitcher.

WIGWAM EXPLOSION BLOWS TRIBE UP TO .500 MARK

GEORGE GRANTHAM FRITZ KNOTHE

WES SCHULMERICH RABBIT MARANVILLE ERNIE LOMBARDI UMPIRE MORAN

Those Cincinnati Reds seemed to have the game all sewed up, when a four-run eighth-inning explosion swept the Warriors to a 6 to 4 victory and a .500 mark in the standing. At top, Grantham slides safely into third, as Berger's throw to knuthe arrives late. Lower scene, Schulmerich, Braves, crosses the plate after his home run in the eighth. Catcher Lombardi gloomily adjusts his mask, while Rabbit waits his turn at bat.

Diamond Dust

—By JOE CASHMAN—

The only winners in the baseball summaries today are the Red Sox and Lynn. All scheduled major league contests except those in Boston and St. Louis were halted by inclement weather. Rain washed out the National league games in New York, Brooklyn and Philadelphia and a cold snap stopped the American league contests in Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago.

Summons for Leo

Leo Durocher, Reds' shortstop, has been ordered to report to a committee that is to stand a trial following a fight at Detroit last summer.

Johnny Moore, Reds centerfielder, wears a white cap in the field which stands out like a beacon light with all the other Bushmen wearing dark grey headpieces. "If that happened in the old New England league," there would be a half-hour argument about it," commented Claude Davidson, when he noticed Moore breaking the law which says all players on a club must be uniformed alike. Moore, no doubt, receives permission from the Braves and umpires to wear his special cap.

Sunny Jim Rattamiles returned to the wars in the second Braves-Reds game after a week's absence with a sprained ankle. He got by until the eighth, when he singled scoring the lone tally against the enemy and he had to retire, holding on to his [illegible] leg considerable pain.

Umpires Correct

Both the Braves and Reds lost several hits on balls that landed foul by no more than the width of a whisker. The eye sight of Umps Moran and Quigley was questioned on nearly every one of the slows but, from where we were sitting, the arbiters saw every ruling correctly.

MATCHES TODAY

Southern vs. Eastern at Thorny Lea.

Northern vs. Western at Kernwood.

By BILL GRIMES

With the four contenders tied, all has not been settled in their two previous tilts, Northern and Western are playing at the Kernwood Country Club and Eastern and Southern are at Thorny Lea today in the third round of the Women's Golf Association team match championship.

The W. G. A. teams have never been as evenly balanced as this season. There is a scarcity of material so the reducing of first teams from 13 to 13 players is responsible for the even competition.

The Northern District opened the season by swamping Eastern at Andover, only to lose to Southern at Dedham. After defeating Southern at Weston, the Western District at Charles River was beaten by Eastern by a margin of one point.

Realizing the importance of victory, all teams are at top speed today. Although on even terms with the other contenders as far as won and lost matches are concerned, the Eastern District has scored the least number of points.

The southern district which has won 13 out of 22 points has six of four players Mrs. C. F. Eaton, Jr., Miss Mary Parkinson, Mrs. W. F. Barden and Miss Eleanor Williams, who have gone through both matches without suffering defeat.

Mrs. F. A. Stanwood, is the only regular member of Southern a first team, who has lost twice.

Although the northern district has no undefeated players on its first team, it has two who has come through in both matches. Mrs. Donald M. Belcher and Miss Sutton are the only double winners on the Northern first varsity.

Miss Martha Brewer and Miss Dorothy Richards have yet to meet with defeats on the Western team.

The four teams are so evenly matched for today's matches that much will depend upon the arrangement of the lineups and with this thought in mind, we favor Western to take Northern and Southern to prove superior to Eastern.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

In the second round of the Twilight Four Ball League, which will be played this afternoon, Albemarle, present leader, is at home with Winchester as its guests. Bear Burn is at Belmont Spring, and Wellesley tries its hand at Charles river.

Albemarle opened the Twilight League with an 11 to 1 victory over Winchester and has enough the edge by 2½ points over Bear Burn. Although Belmont Spring is third, Winchester fourth and Charles R. only fifth.

Although the Twilight League teams are all out to win, they never allow seriousness to interfere with their pleasure. The Tuesday League was organized for the sole purpose of getting some fun out of competitive golf, which is responsible for the popularity of the organization.

Miss Brewer Stars

With victories over Miss Deborah Verry and Miss Ruth Batchelder to her credit, Miss Martha Brewer is the rising W. G. A. player at the present writing, with Mrs. C. F. Eaton, Jr., a close second, due to win over Mrs. W. M. Ferris, Jr., and Miss Margaret Curtis.

PRIMO SAILS FOR N. Y. BOUT

Georges Carpentier, Primo heavyweight champion, today sailed for New York on the first leg of his journey to the forthcoming bout there with Jack Sharkey, the champion.

Carpentier said he would start training at Compton Lake, Long Island, as soon as he arrived in the states. The bout is scheduled for June 29.

"I am certain to whip Sharkey and win the championship," Carpentier told his friends.

Reds Release Frazier

The new crew at the President at Country Club is beginning to click. Jim Shepherd, the new pro, is pepping things up. Andy Thomas, the groundskeeper, is getting his course in shape and Caddy Master Jerry Donovan is training his boys as he did at the Scituate Country Club, from where he was drafted.

HENIGAN SEEKS FAME IN GRIND ON SATURDAY

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Smiling Jimmy Henigan will face the starters gun in the Irish-American A. C. 10-mile run on Saturday, determined to win, and to bring his name back into prominence in the long-distance running game.

Henigan was one of the "forgotten men" of the athletic world before the B. A. A. Marathon, and it wasn't until a few days before the race that reporters, smoking out Jim at his Medford home for the annual pre-race story, learned that he was without work and in dire straits.

Henigan's many admirers and friends rushed to his rescue, but Jimmy knew realized that he's got to keep in the limelight to drive the wolf from his door, for he's too modest and retiring to seek help from those who have cheered and praised him in days gone by, when he was always a leader in road races.

So Henigan will have a double purpose in mind when he starts the shuffle over the pavements of South Boston and Dorchester, Saturday afternoon.

Since the B. A. A. grind, Henigan has gamboled over many miles through Medford and surrounding cities, and he's in condition for the 10-mile jaunt.

Jimmy faces a great field of stars, but that isn't worrying him. He will be opposed to Clarence De Mar and, possibly Leslie Pawson, who had not yet decided to run. But not one of them will bother Jimmy—who'll give everything to win with a double incentive for victory.

KEMPT, RENDA MEET FRIDAY

Joey Kempt of Cambridge and Johnny Renda of Chelsea have been signed to meet in a five-round bout on the ring card with Johnny Indrisano and Jimmy Smith of Philadelphia at the Boston Garden tomorrow night. Billy Ames also announces he has booked Dick Hassett of Philadelphia to oppose Tony Celli of Leominster in a six-round match.

Elmer Chase of New Redford and Packy Madden of Roxbury will also box five rounds. There will be two four-rounders. Danny Taduzno of Lawrence will mingle with Jackie Collins of Haverhill, while Joe Ricciotti of the North End will oppose Young Marsh of Revere.

LEVINSKY K. O.'S RETZLAFF

Chicago, May 4 (AP)—King Levinsky, the self-styled "personality kid" from Chicago's Ghetto, today had racked up his first knockout victory in a long, long time.

Bearing out the contention that there is no good in matching the King with a slugger, Levinsky last night made short work of Charley Retzlaff of Duluth, Minn., who is by no somewhat of a slugger, in the first round of a scheduled 10-round main bout, at the Chicago Stadium.

Retzlaff, after going down for a count of five, rose and was flipped over by a right to the head. He rested on one knee and got up at the count of 10, but was not on his feet soon enough to avoid being counted out.

Fish 'n' Game

For the Fish-of-the-Week Club, three nominees: An eight-pound Chinook salmon caught by G. D. Perrier at Long pond, Plymouth; a 28-inch Sebago salmon caught by Ike Dana, Canton, at the Sharon Club pond and returned to that water; a 17-inch square-tail trout caught by Ernest Pelchry "up Canton way." And "et."

Between Ed Place and Irving O. Scott, treasurer of the Sharon Club, I am due for a ride about Perrier's salmon. Place was fishing one side of me Scott the other, along the steep-pitched east bank. None of us had any action.

I left and 15 minutes later, Perrier, anchored where I had been, hooked the salmon in 20 minutes of fishing, with a live shrimp, three feet below the surface. Scott made another trip, but no boats had action. Try it in about two weeks.

White Perch Found

White perch are swarming in the Parker river at Rylield Sunday among one stretch, 25 fishermen could be counted in view, included among them the Georgetown trouter, Johnny Wilkins and his fellow anglers, Dewey Long, Oscar Smith and Harry Graham.

Fish averaged less than a pound, were taken on clams, grasshoppers and worms. Best white perch fishing when the apple trees are in bloom. Best fishing for tautaug when the dandelions bloom. Best herring fishing when the herring flies swarm. Query: Wilkins reports only small trout taken from Wheeler brook so far.

No news yet of the striped bass fishing. "With the herring running this should be along any time," reports George Bishop. And adds: "I'm not fishing this year. I'm too busy." He means by that he's not fishing as much as other years, he has only been twice so far.

"But you'll be out after stripers?" I asked.

"If I'm living," he said, "Death is the only thing that can prevent that."

Heath Hen Vanishes

The race of Tympanuchus cupido has perished from the face of the earth, Prof. Alfred O. Gross of Rowdale has reported to Fish and Game Director Ray Kenney. In other words there is no longer any last heath hen, among the "windswept scruboaks of lonely Martha's Vineyard."

Five prairie chickens and five sharp-tailed grouse had been held in readiness for the last nuptial vigil.

Sole survivor of his race since December, 1928, the famous "last heath hen" was last authenticity reported March 11, 1932. The bird was handed in April, 1931 and its skeleton some day will probably be found. Prof. Gross is convinced it has perished.

FRED ASTAIRE HOLLYWOOD BOUND

Musical Comedy Star Will Be Featured in Radio Pictures' "Flying Down to Rio"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, May 4—The nimble-footed Fred Astaire, without Adele, who is now Lady Cavendish, is coming to Hollywood. His agents have been negotiating for quite a spell with certain of our studios. But it's Radio who finally signed him for "Flying Down to Rio," a musical comedy.

When I tell you that Vincent Youmans has been engaged to write the score you will know this is going to be a pretentious musical with all sorts of trimmings. The book is by Ann Caldwell and Lou Brock, who used to entertain himself with producing a snappy shorts. Mr. Brock has been put in charge of the whole show.

Louella O. Parsons

Marc Connelly Again

Marc Connelly, playwright, is returning to Hollywood. His last experience here wasn't so pleasant. He didn't like doing nothing and getting paid for it. The movies have changed since those foolish days and he will find that he can earn his salary now. He dines the Paramount company to adapt "Cradle Song" for Dorothea Wieck. It's her first picture and precedes "Hangman's Whip." Wonder if Madeleine Hurlock, who was in the movies before she married Mr. Connelly, will accompany her husband?

A Line Or Two:

Some of these mothers look as young as their daughters. Take Ann Lehr, Ann Dvorak's mamma. She is extremely pretty and attractive. At one time she was a well known screen actress and now she is returning to the screen after some years absence to play a part in "Disgraced" for Paramount. The world's most prolific writer, Owen Davis, has just sold his play, "The Ninth Guest," to Columbia. Davis has written over 200 plays. He won the Pulitzer prize with "Ice Bound." Dozens of his brats children have appeared on the screen. Hollywood has been saying au revoir, bon voyage and hurry back to Jack Votion, former casting director for RKO. He leaves Monday to become assistant in the London offices of Joyce and Selznick. Bill Boyd has lost 30 pounds and his looks something grand. That is why he is back at work with jobs to pick and choose from. He is being teamed with Robert Armstrong in "The Fire-Eaters" for Radio. The story of the Tampico oil fields.

Old Timers Return

The long list of actors filing into the Mascot studios the past 14 days might be a pioneer movie parade. Nat Levine, who is producing "Hanged If I Do" with Victor McLaglen, went out on the highways and byways and signed with a reckless hand people we haven't heard from in a long time. There are such oldtimers as Noah Beery, William Desmond, Tully Marshall, Edmund Breese, J. Farrell MacDonald, Henry B. Walthall, Philo McCullough, Fred Malatesta, Lois Wilson and a few more who haven't been in the movies so long but are still well known; Regis Toomey, Ivan Lebedeff, Bill (Bull) Boyd, Big Boy Williams, Conchita Montenegro, Ruth Hall, Buster Phelps, Frankie Darro and Mathilde Comont. Some cast, is it not?

Snapshots of Hollywood:

WALLACE BEERY had a day off and went trout fishing. WILLIAM HAINES has designed and decorated a dressing room for FRANCOT TONE. DOROTHY JORDAN waited nearly 15 minutes for MERIAN COOPER for dinner in Levy's Tavern. He was busy in the studio. CONSTANCE BENNETT said "au revoir" to her marquis and promised to meet him in Honolulu. LOUIS CALHERN and his bride, busy receiving congratulations from friends in the Beverly Hills Brown Derby. SALLY BLANE said a touching farewell to BRUCE CABOT before she left for New York to join the EARL O WARWICK. She and CABOT were in the Little Club of the Ambassador together. The LEW AYRES-GINGER ROGERS romance is progressing nicely. They were also stepping out together in the Little Club Saturday. BUDDY ROGERS escorted JANET McLEOD. Her former boy friend, RANDOLPH SCOTT, was there with another gal. ABE LYMAN'S orchestra moves into the Cocoanut Grove June 1. BEN FRANK in New York, signed him up. Ramsay MacDonald, prime minister of Great Britain, gives a farewell talk to the American people in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, now at Loew's State. The premier declares that he feels that his mission has been one of great satisfaction, and thanks the American people for the cordiality shown him and his daughter, Isobel, during their stay here.

In honor of President's Day, Sunday, April 30th, Everett Marshall, noted baritone, sings a new song, "I Am An American," composed by Mrs. Marie Theresa Laing, to the accompaniment of the famous Vincent Lopez orchestra, with the Old Maestro wielding the baton.

The annual War of Roses is celebrated in all its glory at Cannes, France, with thousands of visitors participating.

Intimate interviews of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain and former Premier Edouard Herriot of France, the first two foreign statesmen to come to this country on the invitation of President Roosevelt, are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, now at Loew's Orpheum. Mr. MacDonald and his daughter Isbel, are seen and heard as they arrive in New York, and are also seen receiving the old-fashioned Democratic greeting from President Roosevelt and members of his family on the porch of the White House. Herriot is shown arriving in New York, where he delivered through Hearst Metrotone News a message to the United States in English

Bette Davis and Morgan Dennis Are Among Stars on the New Bills for Film Patrons

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

What are good little girls made of, made of? Sugar and spice, and everything nice.

As to the bad girls—perhaps, we had better ask Bette Davis. For here she is, playing the bad, bad girl in "Ex-Lady." Queer thing of the moment in the Boston cinema is this Newton lassie's enacting both types. For while portraying the immoral lady at the Paramount and Fenway, she is to be seen as the genuinely sweet girl in the George Arliss vehicle, "The Working Man," at the Metropolitan.

* * *

But Miss Davis isn't the only home town star to shine in the local theaters this new week. To the Fine Arts on Monday comes Morgan Dennis, famous artist, who once worked with this writer on the Boston Evening American. Morgan's etchings are now known everywhere; in fact they have become so popular that the artist has made a movie. Because he is a Bostonian, he chose this city for the world premiere of it. It will be seen first at the Fine Arts, where Morgan will appear on stage along with "Joe" and Jill" the Scotties, and Miss Eva Farrell who has a role in the film along with Dennie.

These personal appearances will be signal for the gathering of the clans of Dennis' friends. Newspaper folk here will fete the artist; and from Provincetown will come 100 or more from the art colony where Dennis has a studio

* * *

Once more the screen returns to fundamentals. The Valentino "rave" era is recalled by the impending "The Barbarian," in which Ramon Novarro is starred and which is featured at Loew's State tomorrow. This is a dashing tale of a sheik who seizes his occidental beauty (Myrna Loy) and carries her off to his tent.

Keith's on Saturday goes adventuring in another direction: instead of desert settings, there will be the lure of submarine perils, in "Below the Sea," with Ralph Bellamy and Fay Wray.

The Boston presents Evelyn Brent, one of the finest of all screen actresses, in "The World Gone Mad." She is not the star, though well she might be; for she deserves better than the scant words over her in recent years. Pat O'Brien and Mary Brian are featured in this tale of big business and love.

* * *

Other changes bring Mary Pickford and Leslie Howard to the Orpheum in "Secrets"; Maurice Chevalier and Baby LeRoy to the Scollay in "A Bedtime Story"; "Soldiers of the Storm" and "Cavalcade" to the Modern and "Under the Tonto Rim" to the Paramount and Fenway as companion for "Ex-Lady."

De Luxe Revue

The new stage show billed for RKO Keith's Saturday is N. T. G.'s "Broadway Nights Revue," with a cast of 50 and 11 acts, headed by Miriam Hoffman and her syncopators. The featured artists include Charles Melson and Miss Irmanette; Paul Remos and his Toy Boys; Lynne Blair, as mistress of ceremonies; Levan and Watson, comedy team; Leon and Eddy, skater act; Florence Hedges, songstress; the Baltazar Trio, adagio dancers; Adrienne and Dick, and Mackler, Baxter and Dean, knockabout comedy trio.

MODERATE RISE IS RECORDED FOR LEADERS

New York, May 4—Leading shares overcame an early sagging tendency today on the New York Stock Exchange and recorded a moderate rise with scattered gains of a point or two. Bonds at the same time were higher.

The rising tendency in the second period spread in embrace not only rails but also oil and utilities.

Atchison advanced more than 2 points to a new high for the year. Columbian Carbon and Delaware Lackawanna showed gains of 2 points or more. Point or better advances were recorded for U. S. Steel common and preferred, American Telephone, Case, Gillette, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Allied Chemical, Air Reduction, Western Union and Union Pacific.

OPINIONS ARE SPLIT

Commission houses were wondering whether the stock market would be able to penetrate last September's highs before encountering a sharp technical setback. Opinion on this point was divided.

Wall Street was looking forward with keen interest to the address of President Roosevelt tonight before the United States Chamber of Commerce, and financial leaders here were hopeful some general outline of future policy as to inflation might be provided. The President has indicated that he would touch upon fair wages, overproduction and hours of employment, all likely subjects in any seminar of business.

The dollar was heavy in foreign exchange dealings today, sterling was at $3.91¼, a gain of 2¾ cents, while French francs stood at 4.66 cents, unchanged after a 2 points.

California's 9103 producing wells averaged 428,310 barrels of net crude oil daily, or 471 per well, in March. This marks a new low and was due to temporary shutdown of certain areas in Los Angeles basin following the earthquake. The February total net output of 452,180 barrels daily was from 9098 wells.

MORE PENNSY HOLDERS.

Pennsylvania R. R. stockholders April 1, totaled 248,688, against 248,653 March 1, 1932, increase 35, and 248,324 April 1, 1932, increase 364. The total has hovered around 250,000 for the past eight year, reaching an all-time peak Sept. 1, 1932, at 252,142. Average holding April 1 was 32.95 shares, against 33.01 April 1, 1932.

State of Pennsylvania leads in stockholders with 101,691, increase 678. New York has 43,265, decrease 418; New England 30,746, decrease 640. Women stockholders number 107,969 increase 83, constituting 43.42 per cent of holders, owning 32.57 per cent of the stock, an average holding of 39 shares.

Some Wall st. bankers are urging the assurance that inflation will be kept within definite limits is requisite to continued business recovery.

Extreme inflation, it is explained, might in the long run have the same restrictive effect upon the flow of business as deflation.

The business upturn of the past month is described as due to a substantial measure to a rush to convert dollars into goods, or the belief that dollars, if kept, will buy less later on.

But at the same time, this same fear of depreciation may make the under reluctant to lend, and the manufacturer hesitant about extending credit to buyers of his goods.

A view of this aspect of inflation by banking quarters and recent assurances by administration spokesmen that the inflationary powers granted by Congress would be used with prudence and restraint should be definitely instructive.

Advance for Shoe Prices Broadened

Price advances in shoes have broadened to include some of the larger producers, according to reports in the market. One of leading companies was said to have advanced certain numbers approximately $1 a case. Increases by other producers reported to average about 10 cents a pair, Inquiries were heard that another of the largest companies was planning an advance shortly if current strength in hides and leather holds.

Grains Are Higher After Starting Easy

Chicago, May 4—Grains quickly advanced today after an easy start associated with lower wheat quotations at Liverpool and reports of domestic winter crop territory southwest. New speculative buying appeared in volume on price declines but slackened on upturns. Opening unchanged to ¾ off, wheat subsequently averaged high.

Corn started at ⅛ decline to ⅛ gain, and later steadied at around yesterday's finish.

Service Is Improved on Providence Line

Out of dry dock after thorough overhaulings the two big steamers of the Providence Line Richard W. Peck and the Chester W. Chapin drop their gang planks at the piers ready for a big summer's business.

The steamers have been renovated from stem to stern, new fittings, new furniture, new hangings, everything spotless and fresh.

The line officials are determined to make trips to New York on these steamers a delightful service. Music, dancing, entertainment, card games—all will add to the delightful scenic ride down Long Island Sound.

ON THE OTHER HAND

"Representatives were shaken to learn from a Department expert that of the $50,000,000,000 worth of securities sold in the U. S. in the last 13 years one-half were undesirable and worthless."—Washington dispatch.

Get out your pencil and get out your slate
And we'll try to learn a lesson when it's too darned late!
Fifty billion dollars, then divide by two
And you get the answer . . . why we feel . . . so . . . blue.
Half of all the money that we spent for stocks
Woulda been much safer in the nation's sox.
Yet we must remember it was comfortable and nice
For fools like us to dally in a phoney paradise.
The man who shined your shoesies and the cluck who cut your hair
Thought he was potentially a millionaire.
And think of all the college boys (golfing with the dubs)
Who posed as fiscal titans—at the country clubs.
Thus we lived on promises . . . for . . . thirteen . . . years
And never glimpsed the future through . . . a . . . veil . . . of tears.

Hope for Home-Owners

May Soon Be Able to Borrow From U. S.

A man in Waltham who designates himself "A Reader of Your Paper for Many Years" would like to be informed how he or any other home-owner who has had a long streak of bad luck may borrow money from the national government to pay his taxes.

The answer is that it just cannot be done, at the present time.

Congressman McCormack of Boston has proposed an amendment to President Roosevelt's home-relief bill which would allow such borrowings to be made. The legislation is pending at Washington and the signs are that it will eventually be adopted.

In any event we think you should read the gentleman's letter because it relates a typical case of the distress of the American home-owner, patriotic and diligent, who created his home and maintained it for years and who now fears it may be seized from him because of circumstances he cannot control.

"I have a place at ——— Street, Waltham, Mass., which I took over ten years ago. The price was $9500. I paid in $4500, and gave a mortgage to the Waltham Trust Company for $5000.

"I have been unable to pay anything on the principal for some years. I lost my business fourteen months ago, and two months later, while painting, fell from the roof of a two-decker, the roof giving away, and have been unable even to look for work until the present time, and now without success.

"With what little capital I had and drawing all I could on all of my insurance policies, I was able to keep up the interest on the mortgage and live with the exception of paying my 1932 taxes, which amount to $320. I have been trying to sell the place for three years, even as low as $7000, but without any luck.

"I am now in receipt of a summons from the Waltham Assessors, notifying me that if I don't pay my taxes in fourteen days the property will be sold for taxes at public auction."

Now that you have read it, you must be convinced of the necessity for the passage of the legislation. If so, write and tell your Congressman just how you feel about it.

Jury-Fixing

Bar Association Is Investigating

President Robert G. Dodge offers the Boston Evening American the assurance that the Bar Association of the City of Boston is co-operating with the Supreme Judicial Court to put an end to the notorious scandal of jury-fixing.

The matter is now in the hands of the court, Mr. Dodge writes, and any criticism either for delay or inactivity can not be accurately addressed against the Bar Association.

Let us grant that he is right, technically. But let us look also to some practical facts in the matter.

We had always assumed that a bar association was an organization of, for and by the lawyers; that it was purposed to improve the lot and protect the rights of the lawyers and to take drastic, brave and forthright action against any of its members whose pernicious activities might bring the legal fraternity into public disesteem.

No doubt this assumption is accurate. Perhaps there has been no lack of co-operation between the Bar Association and the court, and no delay and no inactivity.

But another practical fact remains, to wit, that the public has seen no disbarments and no criminal prosecutions resulting from the jury-fixing scandals of which the public has a right to suspect the existence in numerous numbers.

The public is disgusted with rackets. Atty.-Gen. Cummings realizes this to be true. For this reason he has given the public notice that the long arm of Washington will strike out against rackets in every field.

Electric Chair and Crime

"You cannot terrify people into virtue."

The Rev. Dr. Spence Burton, noted Episcopal clergyman, made that statement, and no truer statement was ever uttered by anyone.

Rev. Dr. Burton is opposed to the electric chair. Most thoughtful people are.

He was Chaplain at the St. Quentin Prison in California. From his experiences, ministering to people on the verge of their death, he came to know that the electric chair is not a deterrent to crime. If there is any terror which makes against crime it is the long term imprisonment.

Rev. Dr. Burton was one of a fine group of people who this week urged the Massachusetts Legislature to make an official study of the effect of capital punishment and to decide whether this form of vengeance ought not be relegated to the barbaric past from which it came.

Surely it is a simple request. It ought to be granted.

Minimum Wage Laws

Governor Lehman has signed the bill creating a minimum wage law for the great and populous Empire State.

Governor Winant of New Hampshire has signed a similar bill, adopted by the conservative Legislature of the Granite State, with its preponderant agricultural population.

Slowly, it is true, but surely, nevertheless, the country is coming to the high standards set by the State of Massachusetts for protection of its women and children in industry.

In the light of these favorable and humane developments, Massachusetts should stand by its guns. These fine laws for the working people were acquired only after generations of struggle and they should not be discarded now to suit the selfish interests of a few reactionaries.

Make Service Attractive

The Massachusetts Legislature seems intent upon reducing the pay of jurors.

Better than that would be a plan to make jury service more attractive to good men and upright citizens.

It is not so long ago that we exposed some employers who were warning their workers against jury duty on the threat of losing their jobs.

What about a law against these people, who have done their utmost to break down the efficiency, independence and democracy of the jury system?

Something He Didn't Count On

Fortunately for the public safety, Uncle Sam knows how to "muscle in" on some of our better known racketeers.

In violation of the State laws, these moguls of organized crime amass riches—and the States let them get away with it.

But Uncle Sam nabs them when he can for violating his Income Tax Laws. Several racketeers have been sent to Atlanta or Leavenworth prisons, and more probably are on the way.

But it's a strange commentary on law enforcement in this country—immunity for blackmail or murder, but jail for cheating the tax collector.

New York Day by Day

A Feud

O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, May 4—George Jean Nathan is not so assured, as seems the rest of humanity, that Noel Coward is Destiny's Tot. There are those who believe, however, his views are not entirely personal. They recall his ancient enemy, Alexander Woollcott, and Coward arelikethis.

The Nathan-Woollcott feud goes back to nigrescent days of the old Smart Set with his effervescent panegyric "The Seidletz Powder of Times Square." To mix a metaphor, it was a javelin lancing what he regarded as the bumptious swelling of the then critic of the Times.

But this thrust was largely inspired by Woollcott in a review of an operetta. Swinging along in that rhetorical lilt which stirs the Algonquin to hosannas, he abruptly and extraneously concluded with: "It just occurs to me that George Jean Nathan looks like a ticket speculator."

Anyway, Nathan's scoff at Coward's "wit" in a recent magazine is bulwarked by significant research. In a keen analysis he proves that much of Coward's persiflage lies in merely refurbishing moth-eaten gags of vaudeville and pluming them with the feathers of the drawing room.

But when hair grows thin enough to be noticeable, Hollywood has found a non-detectable camouflage. Such luminaries as H. B. Warner, Conrad Nagle, Paul Muni, Reginald Denny and others wear slight hair-pieces that stick on the hair line and comb back through what is left of a star's hair.

Paul Whiteman, however, gave the world its most original mustache about ten years ago. In a close-up then it had been cropped to an inch on each side of the middle part and waxed to a wire nail stiffness. A half dozen steps away it suggested one of those curlicues in blown glass that used to rest in fake moss on Aunt Puss's mantel.

Hanging Women

Elsie Robinson

THIS IS the second article this week on capital punishment. Horrid subject! Revolting details! But you voted for it, partner. So you might as well get used to its discussion. Bad as that is, it's a lot easier than what you wished on the other guy.

And this time I suspect I'm going to get in wrong with both camps. But it will be worth it, if for once I can give my comeback to that question: "SHOULD WE HANG A WOMAN?"

I'll admit right off that's a lovely plea, and a smart one. It may possibly touch the heart of the most fanatical Capital Punisher when ever other argument will fail. For of course, there is something particularly ghastly and pitiful about the thought of hanging a potential mother.

Something more than a woman's body will dangle from that noose or writhe and roast in that chair. The love we bore our own mothers, the tenderness we feel toward our own babies, the sacred memories of our own homes will be wrecked on that terrible bier. And so the finest and most intelligent citizens of our land cry with horror against the hanging of a woman.

YET, AS A WOMAN, I RESENT THAT CRY!

And I honestly believe that, beautiful as it may seem, such sentimentality is all-of-a-piece with that other blood-lust emotionalism which is responsible for all capital punishment.

For if we are to have hangings at all, why spare women?

Why were women ever spared? They were spared, in ancient massacres, not because they were more sacred than men but because they were cattle, valuable as breeders. But women have a new value now, and a new duty. They are citizens, possessing equal opportunity and equal responsibility with men, and, sacred and necessary as their function of motherhood is, it is no more sacred than their function as voters.

And the maudlin attitude which would deprive a woman of her right to equality in death as well as in life, does not protect woman or reverance her. Rather, it shoves her back into the category of the jungle chattel.

Would I hang a woman?

Yes; if I would hang a man, I would hang a woman.

And, were I a murderess, I would rather take my place in the chair beside a man than be spared that fate because I am a female.

So, if we've got to have this grizzly business of capital punishment at all, let's at least think straight about it—see it in its full horror, without any mawkish reservations.

Murder is murder whether it be inflicted on one sex or the other. If a bad man forfeits his right to be a father, then a bad woman forfeits her right to be a mother. And if we, who are outside the bars, have the right to murder that potential father, it is then our duty to murder the potential mother.

SO HANG WOMEN, BY ALL MEANS, IF YOU'RE GOING TO HANG MEN!

Hang her with the same noose; roast her in the same chair!

And, while you're doing it, let the woman outside the death house enjoy equal opportunity. She voted for that noose, that chair. Then let her see the result of her ballot. Why limit execution swoonings and retchings to men only?

Throw open the prison doors! Let us all see the result of our ballot! Let us see the actual show-down of how we really feel about this "sacred" business of life!

Cut out this pretty palaver about our killings—this salving of our consciences by being so choosey with our strangling and our roastings.

IF WE'VE GOT TO STILL BE BLOODY JUNGLE BEASTS LET'S AT LEAST BE CONSISTENT JUNGLE BEASTS—NOT SMIRKING HYPOCRITES!

HANG A WOMAN?

I SAY, YES!

Chance

A wisp of straw from a wagon rack
Blew in his eyes, and turned him back,
Turned him about from the wind which blew
As dust in the eye will always do,
And all because of that wisp of straw
The loveliest girl in the world he saw.

Oh, curious ways of the gods of chance!
He has passed her once with never a glance
For his head was high and his mind intent
On some problem deep as to work he went,
But the wind blew straw from a wagon rack
Which got in his eye, and he turned his back.

And there she stood! The mother to be
In the years to come of his children three!
Yes, there she stood, with a smiling face
And holding her hand in a firm embrace
He got the first look at his mother-in-law,
And all because of a wisp of straw.

Who knows what waits for us down the street
By what curious chances good friends meet,
Had that farmer a moment or two delayed—
A different marriage that man had made,
But a puff of wind and a wisp of straw
Gave him wife and children and mother-in-law.

THIS IS LIFE

Coveted Sheepskin Brings High Price of 49c at Auction

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

A little group of serious thinkers who call themselves "The Unemployed College Alumni Association" is on its way to Washington. They plan to march up Pennsylvania Avenue in cap and gown, to conduct the usual ritualistic demonstration at the White House, and to auction off their discredited diplomas.

R. E. ROGERS

A day or two ago they gathered at Columbia University — naturally — and started by auctioning off one Vassar diploma for 18 cents, one Columbia diploma for 32 cents and—I regret to say—one Technology diploma for 49 cents. Technology, naturally, rates highest, but even that price does not much more than pay for the sheepskin and the engraving and the hand lettering involved.

They are headed by a Harvard graduate, classmate of James Roosevelt and formerly editor of one of the most exotic and "advanced" magazines in the United States. The group claims that the sheepskins they own represent a sum total of $160,000 expended for education.

Sympathy for Bonus Marchers Not Grads

You catch the drift of their argument, of course. The idea is that since these college boys and girls are unemployed—along with some ten or fifteen million other people—their college education was valueless, meant nothing to them, and should be repudiated by the symbolical auctioning of their A. B. and S. B. diplomas. A college education means nothing to them except a preferred position in job-getting.

It is a bit pathetic to see even a small group—such as this is likely to be—lowering itself to such monkeyshines. For the great mass of the unemployed—such as the 300 hunger marchers of May Day—one can have sympathy and respect. For the rank and file, that is. Not necessarily for the leaders, who know perfectly well that they are pulling an advertising stunt and exploiting the workers, often for the sake of a theory that has nothing to do with the mere brute fact of unemployment.

The hunger march is a laborious, taxing, and utterly useless performance, growing more useless with each repetition. On the part of the sponsors and leaders it is only too often an insincere publicity stunt, for which the public pays in contributions, food, and shelter and from which the leaders reap the kind of prestige which passes for accomplishment in the circles of radical propaganda.

But to see men and women who are college graduates, supposedly educated people, taking that kind of circus exhibition seriously and expecting to do any good by it, is amazing. It is on a level with that extraordinary pilgrimage of college students last spring into the district of the striking miners in Kentucky. I have yet to hear that anything was accomplished by those goings-on.

Fruits of Education Important in History

The position of the out-of-work college graduate is, of course, peculiarly tragic. Not that they are suffering any more than the workers who have had to struggle along without education. The chances are that they have been suffering a good deal less, so far as food, clothes and shelter are concerned. As a class they are not usually so close to the verge of actual need. There are usually reserves of some kind.

But the disappointment of these unemployed college people must be particularly marked. Many of them have brains beyond the average, have exhibited ambition and effort beyond the average, have tried to make something of themselves, have spent a good deal of time and effort and good hard money in securing a higher education. To find themselves on the level of the great mass of the unemployed who have not enjoyed these privileges is obviously disheartening.

Yet does not this action, however foolish and natural, display a profound misconception of what education is? To be fair, we must say that it is a universal American misconception. From their earliest days our boys and girls are inculcated with the doctrine that education is chiefly valuable as a lever with which to pry one's self into a higher social position, a better paying wage, a professional white-collar status. That, and little more than that.

Of education as a deepening and enrichening of the mind and the spirit, of education as a fertilizer for a life of cultivated tastes and intellectual pursuits, regardless of what financial position one finds one's self in, there is almost no comprehension. And yet, if statistics mean anything, these fruits of education have been the most important in our American social history.

Delvers into the complicated figures of such volumes as "Who's Who" and its imitators, tell us with authority that the largest number of men and women who have made places for themselves in such books are clergymen's children. Now the clergyman is probably—as a class—one of the best educated people in the United States. He is also, without question, one of the poorest paid. His salary, judged by professional standards, is always woefully inadequate. Yet in such homes of bare comfort and meager luxury have grown up a large proportion of the men and women in this country whose achievement rates "Who's Who."

Diploma Mongers Live on Bread Alone

I should be inclined to think, though I am not sure of the figures, that the children of teachers and college professors also are numerous in such volumes. In such homes, also, there is usually no money to spare, an atmosphere of "plain living and high thinking," which has always been our finest definition of culture.

It is only recently that such a stupid and crass definition of the value of an education as is emphasized by these exhibitionists could have any currency among intelligent people. Today it is, unfortunately all too widespread. That fact and that fact alone excuses these young "intellectual hunger marchers."

Perhaps this depression may do us some good. It may, in the long run, seriously affect our national views of the purpose and the value of education. I hope so. There are signs that it may be so. If this depression, for instance, shall weed out those boys and girls who go to college only because it is "the thing to do," because it is socially useful, regardless of their intellectual capacities, because it is easier and more amusing than working for a living, because it means more money later on, this depression will not have been altogether a bad thing.

These diploma mongers are saying in effect that the man does live by bread alone. There is authority of considerable weight against them.
